Wall Street Goes Wild

NEW YORK (UPI) — They went wild on Wall Street Friday.

There was a record trading volume and the Dow Jones industrial average jumped nearly 20 points.

Buoyed by a brighter economic outlook, stocks scored their best gain in 19 months in an institutional stampede that produced a 52,280,000-share turnover, the heaviest in the New York Stock Exchange's 186-year history.

The Dow Jones industrial average soared 19.92 points to 795.13, the best gain since it climbed 20.28 on Sept. 21, 1976.

The NYSE volume eclipsed the previous record of 44,512,860 Feb. 20, 1976 and prompted brokerage houses in the city's financial district to celebrate with champagne. "It's been a long time," one happy broker said.

Meanwhile, after hitting a record low in early trading, the Canadian dollar staged a significant recovery on New York money markets Friday, amid rumors that an increase in the Bank of Canada's bank rate was imminent.

In confusing and often hectic trading, the dollar bounced back from a low of 86.63 U.S. cents to 87.30 U.S. cents within a matter of hours in the interbank wholesale market.

BATvan Swoop Nets 7

Seven persons will appear in court charged with impaired driving as RCMP in Greater Victoria renew their attack on drinking drivers.

The seven were among more than 2,000 motorists stopped at roving roadblocks carried out over the past three nights by the RCMP's mobile BATvan (Breathalyzer Analysis Testing van).

Sgt. Murray Brown, co-ordinator of the program, says the van will be back on the road tonight roaming the Shawnigan Lake, Colwood, Sooke and Sidney areas.

Besides those charged with impaired, 11 other motorists received 24-hour roadside suspensions, one was charged under the Government Liquor Act, and three with violations of the Motor Vehicle Act.

MYSTERY SEA GAS A KILLER IN BRAZIL

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil (UPI) — Scientists from Uruguay and Brazil are investigating a mysterious cloud of stinking gas that has swept in from the Atlantic, killing thousands of fish, birds, horses and dogs.

Uruguayan authorities alerted inhabitants of a 36-mile stretch of beach south from the Brazilian frontier but Brazilian Health Minister Paulo de Almeida Machado, touring the southern coast of Rio Grande do Sul Friday said air tests were negative along the 50 miles of contaminated Brazilian coastline.

Still, oceanographers, biologists and veterinarians on both sides of the Brazil-Uruguay border were working to determine the origin of the gas and the chemical composition of the agent that has killed thousands of fish and dozens of farm and wild animals.

LONG PLAY records provided wheels for entry in great B.C. Egg race held today at the Provincial Museum. Device, powered by a rubber band, was designed by Mark Knelsen, centre, of Burnaby, and his assistant Jason Potts, wearing striped jacket. Youngsters won first place in Class A section (they were the only competitors in their division) and fared much better than other Rube Goldberg devices that failed to even leave starting line. Ryan in Winning Spot As Que. Liberals Vote

By PETER HADEKEL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC — Claude Ryan appeared to have an insurmountable delegate lead going into today's voting at the Quebec Liberal leadership convention, despite a late drive by his only opponent, Raymond Garneau.

An enthusiastic crowd of 7,500 delegates and observers filled a hockey arena here Friday to cheer the two candidates seeking the leadership vacated by Robert Bourassa in November, 1976.

Although only about 2,100 of the eligible 2,610 delegates had registered Friday night, Ryan stickers and scarves out-numbered Garneau badges and pennants in the delegate section.

And in a question-and-answer period with delegates in the afternoon, Ryan also won the applause derby.

His organization appeared supremely confident on the eve of the voting, while Garneau workers stepped up their intensive drive to win over Ryan delegates and undecideds.

"We will be up all night in the hotels talking to as many delegates as we can on a one-to-one basis," said a Garneau organizer.

"We're still confident because our own polls show us with more than 1,000 delegates."

Organizers for Garneau, the former finance minister in the Bourassa government, were hoping that a couple of mistakes by the front-running Ryan during the question-and-answer session might swing more support their way.

50% SAVINGS PREDICTED

Airline Price War Looming in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. domestic air fares could be cut by as much as half under government proposals to loosen regulations.

Current price ceilings would remain in effect under proposals put forward Friday by the Civil Aeronautics Board that would allow the reductions without the board's advance approval.

U.S. airlines also could increase fares back to current ceiling prices, or anywhere in between, without approval if they found them financially unsound.

The rule, which probably would not go into effect until 1979, is expected to set off a price war and provide passengers with permanent fare reductions, unlike current bargain packages that are of limited duration and come with strings attached.

Consumer experts believe fares on transcontinental routes would be likely to feel the full effect of the regulation.

Round-trip tourist fares between New York and Los Angeles now are $426. A flight from Chicago to Miami now costs $240. Both are expected to be shaved by nearly 50 per cent if the new rule stands up.

The potential rate cuts would apply to normal service on regular schedules, and unlike current bargain packages would not require advance ticket purchase or trips of certain duration.

Consumer advocates and the industry both initially welcomed the move.

"This is an important step to a more competitively priced rate system," said Mimi Cutler, director of the Aviation Consumer Action Project, a Ralph Nader-affiliate based in Washington.

A spokesman for United Airlines, the largest domestic carrier in the United States, agreed, saying: "We are for open competition and let the marketplace settle the price of the tickets."

The rule proposal is subject to a period of public comment before the board drafts a final rule which will also be subject to the filing of objections. Board sources indicated the process could take the rest of this year, but they say the proposal is expected to be adopted.

WIFE SLEPT THROUGH SLAYING

BELFAST (Reuter) — A man was shot to death near here during the night and his wife said she slept through the murder while in the same bed.

Police said today the 27-year-old husband, who was not named, died from a bullet in the head at his home in Newtown Abbey, a few kilometres north of Belfast.

His wife said she awoke in the morning to find her husband dead beside her.

Moro 'Sentenced To Death'

ROME (UPI) — Red Brigades terrorists announced today that kidnapped ex-Premier Aldo Moro had been sentenced to death.

Their sixth message since Moro was kidnapped March 16 said: "There is no doubt that Aldo Moro is guilty and has therefore been sentenced to death."

In identical messages released simultaneously in Turin, Milan and Genoa, the Red Brigades said Moro's "people's trial" was over.

A search by 50,000 police and soldiers has failed to provide any clue to the whereabouts of Moro, kidnapped in Rome by Red Brigades terrorists who killed his five police guards.

Earlier today the Red Brigades released another communique saying they had killed a prison guard for daring to fire back at attackers

Wary Premiers Seek Restriction on Polls

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — The federal government must not take advantage of any powers it has to conduct referendums to avoid consulting with the provinces on constitutional change, the four Western premiers said Friday at the end of a two-day meeting here.

The conference included criticism of the federal government's move Monday to lower provincial sales tax and of what the Western provinces considered to be federal intrusions into their constitutional jurisdictions.

The communique on the proposed Canada referendum act noted that the act provides for referendums on possible constitutional changes.

While the premiers saw the need for Ottawa to be able to conduct the referendums, "they strongly caution against any attempt by the federal government to substitute this machinery for the settlement of constitutional questions long recognized by constitutional practice and precedence as requiring the approval and consent of every provincial government."

Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon said the premiers were raising "a red flag" to the federal government so that there would be no use of referendums to deal with questions of provincial powers under The British North America Act.

The prime concern arises where the powers between the federal and provincial governments are shared or where they are unclear, said Premier Bill Bennett.

He said in those cases, unanimous consent has been the only way to make changes. Until there is agreement on another method of amendment, the provinces do not want to see votes in referendums used to circumvent

FRENCHMEN DIGGING OUT

PARIS (AP) — More than 60 centimetres of snow fell in parts of central and southern France today as an April cold snap, billed by the French weather service as the worst in 30 years, gripped the country.

The weather service said unseasonal storms blocked highways with huge snowdrifts and disrupted communications around numerous towns.

Snow was also reported in the hills of the Mediterranean island of Corsica.

Five French mountain climbers, including two women, were reported missing in the Pyrenees on Friday after one of the women fell into a crevice. A sixth climber in the party went for help, but when rescuers reached the spot near the French-Spanish border, they could find no trace of the other climbers.

Mail Strike Ban a Priority

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Friday the budget debate will be suspended Monday so the Commons can consider legislation to ban a mail strike during a federal election.

If the postal bill gets quick approval, the government also will ask the House to pass a bill guaranteeing the Syncrude oil consortium the international price for the oil it produces in the Alberta oil sands.

These are the government's two top priorities said Yvon Pinard, Liberal deputy House leader.

"Considering the negative attitude in the House for the last three days, I don't think a respite from the budget debate would hurt," he said.

He asked fellow MPs to examine their consciences and do away with politics in order to get these bills through the House quickly.

In the Senate, legislation phasing out price-wage controls got final approval but the government did not bother getting royal assent to make it law.

In Welland, Ont., meanwhile, Ed Broadbent, federal NDP leader, said Friday that continuation of the budget debate is only a charade and that Prime Minister Trudeau should dissolve Parliament immediately and call an election.

Broadbent said he sees no hope of the opposition parties forcing any improvements to the budget through amendments because there is not enough time.

"It's so obvious that they are moving to an election but the prime minister is playing around, saying next week maybe he will name the date," he told reporters during the third day of a four-day trip through southern Ontario.

Canadians Hedge on Quebec, Invest in Florida

By JOHN NORDHEIMER
New York Times

MIAMI — Canadian investors, alarmed by economic and political trends at home, are rushing to buy Florida real estate as a hedge against an uncertain future.

Across the state, and in other sections of the Sun Belt from Miami to Los Angeles, Canadians are snapping up such income-producing properties as shopping centres, office buildings, hotels and motels.

"The pace is accelerating and I don't see the end of it," said one Miami consultant, "unless Ottawa implements foreign exchange control regulations" limiting the amount of assets a Canadian citizen can invest abroad.

Florida has always been a favorite tourist destination for Canadians seeking to break a long winter's siege of "cabin fever." Canadian wealth has also followed the sun to Florida, seeking the same profits through the same kind of investments that U.S. citizens and concerns have cashed in on in the last two decades.

But the separatist movment in Quebec has clearly stimulated a fresh round of Canadian dollars moving across the border from all the provinces.

Florida, already the target of Latin investment and attracting the attention of Europeans worried about deteriorating political conditions on the Continent, appears to be the focal point of overseas investors seeking a safe haven in the United States for surplus capital.

"Without question, the volatile political climate in Quebec has Canadians worried about the future stability of the country," said Earl Brown, a Canadian lawyer living in Miami who has acted as a consultant for major real estate transactions. "They see a very unstable economic situation throughout Canada for many years to come because the political problems are seriously complicating the country's ability to pull out of its economic recession."

Florida blossoms with Canadian money

Unemployment in Canada is at the highest level since the Depression, the inflation rate is nearly double-digit and the Canadian dollar has fallen off to an exchange rate of 87 cents for the U.S. dollar.

Bosses' Deck Stacked: CUPE

TORONTO (CP) — As mandatory wage controls are phased out, employers will continue to hold "what is more or less a stacked deck" in contract negotiations, Grace Hartman, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), said today.

With more than one million persons out of work, "more and more employers are using the threat of cutbacks to intimidate the workers and reduce their militancy," Ms. Hartman said in a speech for delivery to a municipal employees' co-ordinating committee.

"Another major problem we are facing at the bargaining table is the new game being played by public sector employers," Ms. Hartman said. "This new game is called takeaway."

"Employers now coming to the bargaining table with the expressed intent of removing hard-won rights from the existing collective agreement."

Ms. Hartman said union negotiators had traditionally assumed that the purpose of bargaining was to improve the wages and working conditions of the employees concerned.

"Employers now see negotiations as constituting an opportunity for them to take away gains already won by the workers," she said. "This phenomenon has been labelled 'gutting the contract' and has become a serious threat to the union's ability to advance the interests of our membership."

One of the "first notable examples of gutting" occurred in British Columbia in 1976 in negotiations between the Mid-Island Employers Association and CUPE members in municipalities, school boards and a college, Ms. Hartman said.

Among other things, the employers' association wanted removal of seniority rights in determining promotions and transfers; elimination of overtime premiums by extending the normal hours; a cut in lay-off notice to 10 days from 30 days, an increase to a year from three months in the term of service required before receiving sick leave and extension of the probationary period to one year from three months, she said.

"In the end, it took a 10-week strike by our members' to preserve the benefits and language contained in their old contracts."

"The pattern so viciously begun in B.C. has now begun to surface everywhere . . . and there is no question this trend is going to intensify," Ms. Hartman said.

THE OUTCASTS

Israel Line Softened

JERUSALEM (WP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan Friday signaled what is a significant softening of Israel's position on withdrawal from the occupied West Bank.

In a cautiously worded television interview which is believed to have been coordinated with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Dayan asserted the belief that a UN resolution calling for Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories on the West Bank applies to the negotiations between Israel and all its neighbors, including Jordan.

TRUANT BOY'S PARENTS FINED

COURTENAY (CP) — The parents of a youth who has been absent from school since Sept. 16 were fined $1 on each of 62 counts of failing to send their child to school, Crown counsel T.G. Ryan said today.

Walter and Mary Voeltz pleaded guilty to the offences which took place between Sept. 16 and Dec. 16. Maximum sentence is $10 on each count.

They were given until July to pay the fine after the judge was informed that Voeltz is unemployed and on welfare.

During the trial, Ryan accused the parents of "gross dereliction of duty," but Voeltz said he could not get the boy, aged 14, to attend school.

"What am I supposed to do, half kill him?" he asked the court.

Court was told by the probation service that it was a social problem.

No Forced Tipping - LAB

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Liquor Administration Board has forbidden the charging of compulsory tips by establishments holding liquor licences.

A board spokesman said Thursday the order was issued last week following complaints that some Vancouver-area restaurants were adding a mandatory 12 or 15 per cent surcharge to customers' bills, a practice often applied in Europe.

The spokesman said the practice conflicts with the board's pricing policies and that offending establishments will be warned they could lose their licences if they continue to add the surcharge.

Marijuana For Future

VANCOUVER (CP) — The author of a book promoting the use of marijuana suggests the W. A. C. Bennett dam near Hudson Hope be renamed the Wacky Tabaccy dam because a capsule containing the drug was embedded in wet concrete during construction of the structure last summer.

Peter Curran said in an interview Friday that he and five other workers at the British Columbia Hydro dam site placed six large marijuana cigarettes in a capsule and dropped it into 100 feet of wet concrete "with a little note for whoever finds the joints."

SOVIET NOT AMUSED BY 007

OTTAWA (CP) — Ambassador Alexander Yakovlev of the Soviet Union is not amused at being 007.

007 was the code number of James Bond, fictional superspy and scourge of enemy agents.

007, or more precisely CDA 007 is also the licence plate on the ambassador's sleek black Cadillac and the embassy is not pleased with the attention it draws.

"Why don't you write about something more serious?" a diplomat asked. "The Soviet embassy objects."

L.A. Level Smog For Vancouver?

VANCOUVER (CP) — An associate professor of geography at the University of British Columbia says Vancouver is well on the way to developing the same smog problems that are ruining Los Angeles.

"We've got the same cars, the same kind of topography, the same land and sea breezes and the same high pressure system boxing us in," Dr. Tim Oke told a service club Friday.

"I'm no gloom and doom man, but it bothers me that we're facing the same future that Los Angeles did 40 years ago and not doing anything about it."

Oke said Vancouver is literally boxed in because of the topography and meteorology of the area. Emissions, 80 per cent of which are caused by automobile exhaust, are prevented from escaping upwards by heavy layers of warm air acting like the lid on a "coffin", he said.

He said morning sea breezes carry emissions up the Fraser Valley and afternoon sunlight intensifies their potency so that inhabitants along the Fraser River are actually in a worse position than Vancouverites, even though they're living miles away from industrialized core areas.

The Lower Mainland should be beefing up pollution monitoring through government agencies or individual research, Oke said.

"We're away behind Ontario, Quebec, the Maritimes, the U.S.A. and European countries in this. Quick and efficient monitoring would enable us to forecast, to establish controls. We'd know when to ask industries to cut back on production, when to warn the population about serious pollution danger," he said.

"With the right research, we'd have the basis for deciding whether or not it's better to keep on extending Vancouver's borders, or whether we should be decentralizing—looking to other municipalities as possible expansion centres.

Oke said Port Moody has the worst pollution potential of the region.

Accused Killer 'Insane'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. James Tyhurst, a psychiatrist at the University of British Columbia, said Friday that Walter Murray Madsen's behaviour fit the Criminal Code definition of insanity at the time four teen-agers were killed last July.

Tyhurst, testifying in B.C. Supreme Court, said Madsen, 24, shows all the major and most of the minor syptoms of schizophrenia, a common mental illness characterized by withdrawals from reality and delusions of grandeur.

Madsen is charged with the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, his brother Jan, 16, Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16. The bodies of all but the girl were found in the Fraser River near the spot where the group had been drinking beer when attacked by a man with a rifle.

Tyhurst also testified that Madsen is a Walter Mitty-type character whose illness has been a gradual, insidious process, probably starting when he was between nine and 14 years old.

The psychiatrist concluded that Madsen's actions fit the Criminal Code's definition of insanity, a definition earlier clarified by Justice J. G. Gould.

The code says a person is insane when he is "in a state of natural imbecility or has disease of the mind to an extent that renders him incapable of appreciating the nature and quality of an act or omission or of knowing that an act or omission is wrong."

'No Question' Of Postal Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said Friday there is no question of cutting back on existing postal services.

He was commenting on published reports alleging that a secret post office study, Manpower Goals 1981-1982, detailed proposals for home delivery cutbacks in Vancouver.

"There is nothing secret about the report at all," Lamontagne said in a telephone interview. "The paper was strictly an internal discussion paper and a study of how to get along with limits on man-years."

A man-year refers to the 2,087 hours worked by a man in one year.

He said the report was not a policy position and had not even reached the office of his deputy minister.

News stories indicated the alleged cutbacks were part of a national goal to reduce the current postal deficit of $580 million by 1982 by:

—Home delivery of mail on alternate days.

—Deliveries to roadside mail boxes in all new housing developments and later in established suburban areas.

—Giving responsibility to apartment block managers for parcel deliveries to their tennants.

Although Lamontagne said he assured union leaders that the study would not be utilized, Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), accused the post office of deceiving the public and the postal workers.

A Good Idea

The provincial fire marshal's suggestion that all homes be equipped with smoke detectors is the best idea we've ved heard for dealing with British Columbia's shockingly high incidence of deaths and damage due to fires.

They are relatively inexpensive (compare the cost to the value of your home, your life and the lives of your family) devices, $20 to $90, simple to install and maintain. A nine-volt transistor radio battery keeps them working for months.

Shop around — there are many brands of smoke detectors (Consumer Reports magazine in 1976 and 1977 published three excellent reports on the devices, ranking them by efficiency and value for money; copies are available at the public library), but basically only two types. The ionization type uses a small amount of a radioactive element to detect the invisible ions created at the outset of combustion process. The photocell variety will detect visible smoke particles at a slightly later stage. Both warn residents with a loud, piercing horn. They are extremely effective.

Many people think they would be able to escape a house fire, that the heat and noise of the flames would rouse even the heaviest sleeper in time.

But the fact is that the real killers in a house fire are the fumes and smoke created at a very early stage of combustion. By the time flames are licking at the roof, anyone caught inside a burning home is probably dead already of asphyxiation — smoke inhalation.

Smoke detectors of course will not prevent fires. Careful storage of flammable liquids and watchful handling of fireplaces and cigarettes, regular disposal of old newspapers and rags, inspection of your home's electrical wiring — these and other precautions which the fire department can tell you about will do that.

But a smoke detector is still a wise investment even if you follow all of these recommendations. Anything which reduces the danger and gives a family a better chance of getting out alive is worth a few bucks.

Very Hard to Believe

It is incredible these days, but there are still some people who firmly believe unemployment is a myth, that there are jobs out there for the taking. If only those hundreds of thousands of layabouts would get off their butts and look, they say.

One such far-thinking optimist is Jack Kempf, Social Credit MLA for Omineca in the north-central part of British Columbia. Taking part in the throne speech debate last week, he stated blithely

"We do not have an unemployment problem in Omineca. Jobs are going begging right now.

"There are 100,000 people (in B.C.) on unemployment insurance but there are not 100,000 people looking for work. . . . Let them go where the jobs are. Don't let them stay on the Lower Mainland . . . looking for government handouts."

What will it take to convince Kempf and the many others he represents of the magnitude of the problem? It's obvious they don't believe the independently gathered figures of Statistics Canada (which show Region Four of B.C., the northern half of the province which takes in Omineca riding, with a 25 per cent unemployment rate).

The evidence of their own eyes does not convince them. Demonstrations at the legislature have no effect; they are just "troublemakers" seeking to embarrass the government. Time and again this newspaper and others have printed pieces on unemployment, the kind of story where 80 or 90 people apply for a messenger's job (a true account of what happened when the Times advertised for that position) or hundreds go after two cashiers' jobs (it happened in Langley, the minister of health's riding).

If the MLA for Omineca would only tell us where all these jobs are to be had in his riding, we'd be only too glad to tell our readers about them.

Unemployment is a real and serious problem. Statements like Kempf's bespeak an awesome political immaturity, a truly magnificent delusion. They don't help at all.

Zero-Based Budgeting: Only Window-Dressing?

Before the B.C. budget introduced last week is officially passed, civil servants in at least three ministries of the provincial government will begin to work on the budget for 1979-80.

The three, not yet officially identified, are those that will be converting this year to zero-based budgeting, a management technique that has captured the imagination of the B.C. treasury board because of its potential for bringing a little bit of order out of a budgetary process that is now somewhat chaotic and absurd.

Put simply, perhaps oversimply, the way the process works now is that each division of each ministry sends its minister a budget that normally consists of everything it spent the year before plus something for inflation plus something for expansion. The minister takes the lot to treasury board (the cabinet committee that holds the purse strings) where, after much arguing, some of the cash intended to cover inflation and several of the expansionary programs are chopped off.

In some cases, each division puts in a "bare-bones budget" and an "expansionary budget," knowing full well that what it will get is probably a little less than what it termed its bare-bones budget.

Once learned by all the players, this system leads to great games among the bureaucrats and politicians, games that sometime make the process bear more resemblance to labor negotiations than to logical planning. The bureaucrats submit significantly more than they really need, the politicians begin by chopping far more than they really can, and eventually the two sides meet somewhere in the middle.

Never has a reasonable evaluation been done of the effectiveness of current programs, nor, in many cases, of the need for planned new ones.

Zero-based budgeting was designed to deal with some of these problems. Under this new system each ministry and each division must work out a list of its goals and priorities and place each program, both current and planned, on the priority list according to the objectives listed. The assumption is that each year the ministries must justify all their programs and financial needs, not just their increases from the year before.

But the public should not expect that zero-based budgeting will be a a panacea for all the ills of government spending. To put it even more strongly, zero-based budgeting is unlikely to effect much change in the horrible problems of "how-the-government-spends-your-hard-earned-tax-dollars" unless some far more basic changes are made at the same time.

Zero-based budgeting sounds great on paper. It sounds ideal that ministries have to evaluate all their programs at least once a year, must ensure that the programs have something to do with what the ministry thinks it should be doing, have to watch out that programs don't overlap and maybe even cut back or entirely eliminate a program if it loses out in the evaluation process. All those things, like the calls for restraint in past years, are things that ministers and top civil servants know they ought to be saying. So they say them: they say them to the public and they say them to more junior administrators.

Unfortunately, however, even as they are saying them, the whole system of the public service is saying something else. It is telling those junior administrators that rewards are not given for evaluation, co-ordination and the courage to eliminate useless programs; rather, rewards are given for acquiring more staff, more square feet of floor space, and, especially, a larger budget to administer.

In the public service a person with 35 staff members under him gets, except in the most exceptional circumstances, a larger salary than a person with four staff members under him. A person administering a budget of $10 million gets, again except in the most unusual circumstances, a larger salary than a person administering a budget of $1 million.

What this means is that any middle management person who took zero-based budgeting seriously would probably be working against his own self-interest. If he found that the work now being done by 23 people could be done just as well by eight, he would have followed zero-based budgeting well, but he might easily have reduced his own salary in the process.

This cleft stick into which managers are thrust by zero-based budgeting does little except defeat the entire purpose of the new system.

If the government is serious about its commitment to restraint and to zero-base budgets, it will have to work out a system under which restraint and proper evaluation are rewarded rather than punished. Otherwise it will be no more than window-dressing, covering up a system in which expansion is still — can scarcely help being — the goal of most managers working in the civil service. — B.McL.

How to Control Spending

WINNIPEG — The Manitoba government has been told by the best businessmen in the province that the only way to get spending under control is to upset the base on which bureaucracies have been built around the world.

The report of the Task Force on Government Economics and Organization, commissioned soon after the Progressive Conservative government took office last October, says that business-like economics can only be achieved if civil servants are rewarded for efficiency and cost-cutting, and punished for spending.

While there are a number of specific recommendations for cutting expenditures that will interest, in the main, the taxpayers of Manitoba, the over-all recommendation, if it is implemented, could provide a barometer against which other senior governments in Canada could measure the cost of turning around conventional bureaucratic thinking.

Budget = Success

At present, most senior governments operate on a system whereby department heads use the previous year's budget as a base, ask for more than they think they can possibly get, and operate on what they finally end up with. If they are successful in establishing a new, higher base, they are rewarded, if not in salary, at least in influence, since the measure of success in government is the size of budget one controls.

The Manitoba government has been told that the system must be changed to reflect common business practices, that of rewarding a department head that manages to complete his year under budget, and replacing the man who cannot work within the money he is given.

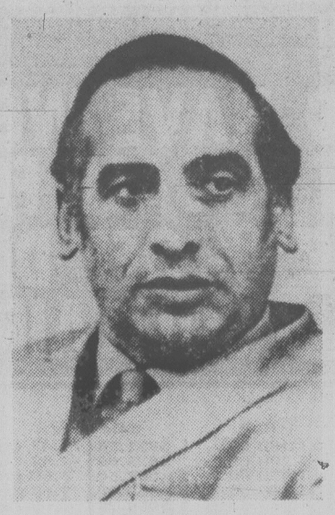
The task force does not spell out what form of rewards should be offered for efficiency, but is firm on the punishment angle. Whether any government could apply such changes to an established bureaucracy is something that will have to be seen.

In addition to the basic change in attitude, the task force recommends a change in budget policy, putting every government program on a zero-based budget, and making each department justify each program in its entirety each year, rather than using established programs as a base.

The task force recommends changes in the structure of the Manitoba cabinet, the abolition of the former administration's planning and management committees of cabinet. In their place, the task force recommends an inner and outer cabinet, but suggests that the principle responsibility for government decisions be put on the shoulders of line department managers.

The report itself comes from the work of a largely volunteer, business-oriented group of people who were charged by Premier Sterling Lyon soon after he took office last October to examine the patterns of government spending and recommend changes for better control.

The establishment of the force came as no surprise, considering the Conservative election campaign was basically one of accusing the former New Democratic administration headed by Ed Schreyer of mismanagement and lack of control of the public purse.



SIDNEY GREEN
. . . bought two shares

However, the spectre of dozens of non-government employees prying into government books was enough to persuade the former NDP house leader, Sidney Green, to purchase personally two shares of Great West Life Assurance Co. stock so that he could have access to the financial statements of one of Manitoba's largest private businesses, and one which had furnished many of the volunteer task force members.

Green subsequently wrote a letter to the president of Great West Life, pointing out that the business expenses of the company had risen by nearly 300 per cent during the last 10 years (the same figure used by the Conservatives regarding government costs) and suggesting that Great West might make use of a task force comprised of skilled civil servants to determine new economic policies.

Green did not mention that he had voluntarily involved himself with the expenditures of Greast West Life, while the taxpayers of Manitoba were compelled to participate in the expenditures of government.

The new Manitoba government could be motivated to give the task force recommendations a try, simply because of the financial situation the government claims it is in.

Soon after taking office, the new government announced that Manitoba's current deficit would not be in the $20 million range, the figure mentioned by the previous administration, but was in fact $225 million if current and capital deficits were combined.

The first volume of the task force report goes further. It suggests that previous policies would have added another $400 million to the deficit during the 1978-79 year.

Massive Restraint

Since Manitoba is already spending about 14 cents out of every tax dollar to service long-term debt, the new government declined to borrow more for operating expenses, saying that any new borrowings would put Manitoba in first place as the province with the highest per capita debt.

Instead, the Manitoba government embarked on a massive restraint policy, and has already pared close to 2,000 people from the public payroll.

The government has just introduced estimates for the coming year which show an increase of less than three per cent over last year, the lowest rate of increase in the country.

The government has also held the line on hospital costs, allowing less than a three per cent increase, and has told educational institutions that they, too, must live within these limits.

The cutbacks, coming as they do at a time when the national economy is hurting, are drawing much criticism during the current session of the legislature. But Manitoba's finance minister, Donald Craik, states simply that it is a matter of cutting back, or entering a period of controlled bankruptcy.

Given these circumstances, it is easy to see why the government might look with favor on a change in control of government spending. If it can put bureaucrats on a business basis, the move could be a first for the country, if not for the world.

Saanich Hospital

As a member of the board of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital I deplore the misleading statements which have recently appeared in the Victoria press concerning the new 75-bed acute care unit of the hospital, especially the statement that only 45 beds will be available for acute care.

The Saanich Peninsula Hospital board has been under a great deal of pressure to alleviate the critical scarcity of beds for advanced surgical care. We realized our responsibility to the peninsula community at large, and were reluctant to accede to the pressure — but some of us were also aware that members from our own community could very easily be amongst those awaiting major surgery such as only the specialized hospital is equipped to handle.

Finally, after receiving a letter from the minister of health outlining the urgency of the situation and after much heart-searching, and with the assurance that this would only be a temporary arrangement until the Glengarry extended care hospital opens in November, the board forwarded a letter to the minister of health:

"The decision of the board was to agree to your request that 22 acute care beds be temporarily used for extended care patients, which will include approximately 10 from Resthaven Hospital, and two additional beds in the extended care unit, on the following conditions:

1. That the status and establishment of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital remain as presently designated, 75 acute care and 75 extended care beds.

2. That the arrangement be until the Glengarry extended care unit is opened Nov. 1. . . ."

It is unfortunate that an effort was not made to find out the facts of the matter before making statements to the press.

The community may be assured that the Saanich Peninsula Hospital board is committed to retaining the present status of a 75-bed extended care and a 75-bed acute care hospital. — Nell Horth, 10836 Deep Cove Road.

Where's Cathy?

I am very disappointed that your newspaper no longer runs the comic strip Cathy. Many younger people like myself enjoyed its humor and its comments on the rights of women.

Please reconsider your decision — Lindsay Neilson, Age 11, Lochside School.

Desperate Acts

I wonder how valuable Grace McCarthy's tourism campaign will be in the final analysis?

Victorians are urged to fix friendly smiles on their faces (advertising the same with garish buttons pinned to their tweedy lapels), lure the visitors out of their cars and onto the double decker buses or into the various shoppes full of ye olde bone china, tea and toffee in plaid boxes.

I wonder how many prospective tourists read Victoria newspapers and are appalled at our desperate measures to get them here? Victoria is populated by reasonably friendly human beings and has a certain natural charm.

The average tourist is more inclined to aquaint himself with Victoria's genuine attributes on his own informal sightseeing jaunts than on some jolly tallyho tour or over crumpets and tea in one of our "authentic olde worlde" establishments. — Theresa Kishkan, 818 Mann Avenue.

Legalization Now

I am writing in response to your recent article, Pot Bill Revised, by Jim Robb.

Mr. Robb manages to convey a suitable air of boredom with the tedious "footdragging" of the politicians on the question of marijuana. Could it be that I am having to wait for something to be done south of the border before the government here will make any move toward legalization?

This is the most important issue of our times and Canada has a wonderful opportunity to become the champion of basic human rights by loudly and clearly declaring the truth concerning marijuana; that it is a sacrament in that it is an aid to enlightenment; that this mild psychedelic poses no psychological or physiological health problems unless, of course, it is poisoned by government agents; and that the present situation amounts to religious repression and has nothing to do with the Canadian Medical Association which is attempting to claim authority on an issue for which it is no better qualified than anyone else. — L. Once It Was Just Running . . .

LINDA BLANDFORD
Manchester Guardian

NEW YORK — The best time is midnight. Drawing on my powder blue and white, color co-ordinated, 100 per cent Acrylic, Munsing-wear warm-up suit, my Hibulk, cushion-foot, sweat-pumping Orlon socks, my red, white and blue Adidas SL 72 training shoes with extra-absorbent wedge heels and orthopaedic supports, clicking my Cronus LC-40CD liquid crystal stopwatch into action — I set off.

There are 1,600 heel strikes to go on my LSD training program. Will I run into oxygen debt tonight? Are my mitochrondrial enzymes synthesizing faster? Will I tire as my pulse hits 75 per cent of the hypothetical maximum? All this to run ten blocks to 96th Steet and back. I have become a jogger, American-style.

It is talked of as the greatest egalitarian movement since blue jeans and the counter-culture of the sixties. Millions of Americans (the number doubles every month) running for joy along the pavements and in the parks. No membership dues, no lessons, no reservations, no expense. All you have to do is to go out and put one foot in front of another.

In some ways, it is a continuation of the sixties with its Frisbee-throwing, non-competitive ethos. In this country devoted to winning, infatuated with victory, there must always be a loser. It is the gladiatorial arena. Will Borg kill Connors? Will the Dallas Cowboys slaughter the Denver Broncos in the Superbowl? Indeed, will Carter beat Ford? And now there is jogging, a sport in which, except at the very top, there is no competition, no losers, only winners.

The woman up the road with the loafer's heart, smoker's lung, and drinker's liver is currently shuffling one 21-minute mile. She's still winning over her former self for whom three minutes was an eternity of pain. "Hey lady, I can walk faster than that," jeered a bystander last night. "Sure you can," called another jogger as he sprinted past them both, "but she's done 15 miles." That's the camaraderie of the sport.

On an average weekend there are now as many joggers on our street as pedestrians. We encourage one another with a quick nod, a wave. We believe ourselves to be the new elite of this city. Who else but another new jogger would know that beneath this concrete are muscle-beating hills barely visible to the naked eye? Others may sink into the flesh of New York, only we can trace its skeleton.

And therein lies the problem. It's no longer enough to run. The elite has found it necessary to mystify the whole process and wrap it up in science. Is this the legacy of the moon shot generation? That nothing can happen unless science is with you? No one runs until they can breathe more easily any more. You make charts of aerobic points and calculate the volume of oxygen per minute. You don't listen to your heart pounding; you take your pulse. You don't feel drained after you run; you need to replace your depleted electrolytes.

So here I am jogging a mile a day then rushing home to swallow 500 mg. of calcium and 310 mg. of magnesium in fast-disintegrating phosphorous-free tablets with 10 mg. of pantothenic acid and a super balanced B-50 capsule in a yeast, alfalfa, watercress, parsley, lecithin, and rice bran base. It's the ritual of ingesting the magic substance. Alice in Wonderland, birthday cake, Indian peyote — and now post-jogging vitamins. The American Bicentennial Everest Expedition swallowed Body Ammo — so must the Central Park joggers. Where would the serious runner be without the complete amino acid supplement from Protein Researeh Laboratories of California, only $4.50 a bottle?

And that's before we even get on to carbo-loading. No one eats steak before the big push these days. That's out of date. The new eating regime involves a low-carbohydrate, high protein period before packing the system with spaghetti and the muscle cells with glycogen.

Listen to the enthusiasts in the Athlete's Foot comparing carboloading: "And how far did you run?" I asked the glycogen freak and apparent marathon expert next to me. "Half an hour," she said. "But I'm on LSD." LSD, long slow distance, is the aerobic endurance building program. It just means running a long way rather slowly; LSD sounds better.

The Athlete's Foot is a running goods' franchise that started in Pittsburgh in 1971. My local branch on West 72nd street, a sliver of a store, opened a year ago and has so far sold over 20,000 pairs of running shoes, average price $30. As a market, jogging obviously has more to recommend it than the hula hoop (remember that?). A decade ago only a few firms made running shoes. "Now there are hundreds and hundreds," says the Athlete's Foot's cheerful owner, who regrets that he has room to stock only 15 of them.

Do you know how it feels to be faced with 50 different styles from 15 manufacturers? Do I need the total breathability of a durable mesh upper? Would the computer-tested nipple cushion my degenerative ankle joint? Isn't everyone else flying into the New Balance Grail 355 with its flat head stud sole of Nora-Tuff?

Anyone who thought that the end of the tennis boom and the rise of the running era would hurt the sports firms hadn't taken into account the ingenuity of the American producer nor the conditioning of the consumer. No one doubts that the swoosh no-bounce bra will be with us shortly to join the cuddly feminine fashions for the social jogger.

She has her own magazine now, after all. I can't believe that Today's Jogger is aimed at the marathon runner with cover lines that read: "The Jogging Date," "Special Concerns for the Lady Jogger" and, in bigger type, "Jogging for Sex." For what? "Learn how jogging can be sexy as the author watches women jog and become sex objects, just as he hopes he is a sex object to the women watching him."

It's enough to make you burn your shoes and read a book, which we do anyway, of course. Every bookshop now has dozens of DIY guides: "Jog, Run, Race," "The Running Foot Doctor," "The Complete Runner," "Women's Running." And the jogger's bible, James F. Fixx's "The Complete Bbook of Running," 405,000 hardcover copies in print.

James Fixx once worked for magazines and weighed 220 pounds; now his life is dedicated to running and he's down to 159. He's a "running for joy" man who supports his thesis with uplifting quotes from Seneca and Socrates.

Thanks to him we all know that Nina Kusesik was 13 miles towards winning the women's division of the Boston Marathon '72 when she had an uncontrollable attack of diarrhoea. Now diarrhoea's out into the open, we all talk about it and recognize it as beautiful — along with dripping sweat.

And for those who have come to accept their bodies, broken through the pain (and balanced their cheque books), only $575 will take you to Athens this summer for The Spirit of Pheidippides Marathon, advertised, if you can believe it, as the first "roots race." You too can run the same course as the heroic Greek warrior in 490 BC. What was that he said before dropping dead? Ah, yes. "Rejoice, we conquer." Sounds like a jogger to me.

Not the Way to Save Senate

By GEORGE BAIN

OTTAWA — It takes a little getting used to to suddenly find everyone — give or take a few — looking at the Senate of Canada as the place where the salvation of the nation may be found.

Looking at the Senate for anything, anyhow, has not been a major Canadian occupation.

From time to time the old parties, usually when in opposition, have talked vaguely of reform of the Senate, but in office they always have found other questions making more pressing demands on their time and minds.

The New Democrats — who, of course, have never been in power federally to make good the threat, or promise — have tended to be abolitionist.

But, then, they do have that difference. From the other side of the House it is not possible to appreciate the full value of the place as a last pasture for old party warhorses — a redeeming feature not lost on Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, as witness his most recent appointments.

So the Senate has gone on, doing more good work in some of its inquiries than it gets credit for, quiet, unhurried, unoffending, and generally sort of cuddly — spared radical change or abolition by the same sort of benevolent inertia as keeps so many unwanted kittens from being drowned.

And now, all of a sudden, it is centre stage. Make it over as sort of sounding board of the provinces or regions, and, with a few fiddling changes here and there elsewhere, alakazam, unity is saved.

Um, well, yes.

But just one question: Once you've got all those high-powered provincial delegations seated in the red chamber under the World War I paintings, the premiers themselves popping in and out as ex-officio members, what are you going to give them to do?

As matters stand, the House of Commons has little enough power, and the Senate none — or none it's going to insist upon using.

The Senate knows better than to get in the way of the Commons. If it didn't, it could take guidance from the United Kingdom where the Conservative-dominated Lords not so long ago was unwise enough to assert itself — and determined the Labor government on its abolition.

A House of the Provinces, as the Senate's proposed successor is being called, would need to have power. Changing the method of appointment wouldn't achieve much if the new appointees were left with nothing to do but to influence the other place, as best they could, with their regional viewpoints.

Influence of that sort doesn't usually interest politicians.

So the creation of the new House of the Provinces necessarily would involve a major alteration in the relationship between the two Houses. And power given to the House of the Provinces necessarily would mean power taken from the House of Commons.

A dilution of the power of the elected assembly to elevate that of a non-elected one?

And if the representatives to the House of the Provinces were appointed — either all, or some of them — by the provinces, what would be the situation when a provincial government changed during the life of a federal Parliament?

The provincial representation in the House of the Provinces then would reflect neither the viewpoint of the majority in the province nor the national Parliament but simply so many individuals, responsible to no one.

The idea of giving more expression to regional and provincial interests in the national Parliament has everything to be said for it, but perhaps it should be encompassed in a move to a frankly congressional system.

Scientists Must Speak English

THE ECONOMIST

Imagine you are an otorhinolaryngologist (ear, nose, and throat specialist). You are working on how to help people with runny noses. Then you read this, about how a group of genes for making runny noses can be turned on or off:

> Transcription termination of the PR-initiated mRNA (8-9S RNA) within the intercistronic region between the genes for cro and cII is absolutely dependent on the protein termination factor.

Important-sounding stuff. Only thing is that you do not know what the devil this bloke, from a different discipline, is talking about.

The passage above is a genuine one from Nature magazine (though the genes come from an obscure virus, and have nothing to do with human noses). It illustrates a common problem: even scientists are baffled by each other. Pity, then, the poor layman.

As it happens Nature's editor often pleads for manuscripts that are easier at least for other scientists to understand. Precision is important in science, so much of its language must be technical. But some scientists are themselves getting impatient with increasing use of jargon; many can be as clear as a bell when pushed. A virologist recently complained about the rechristening of well-known viruses with spurious Latin names. A top weather expert criticized the use of "climatic optimum" (which describes in fact what could be the disastrous warmest period between ice ages — or glaciations, as many scientists prefer, quite unnecessarily, to call them). So much of the exciting work in science now involves several disciplines that to confuse by language is to hamper science. Richard Leakey has 16 disciplines helping him dig up early man in east Africa. Astronomy used to be just physics and maths but now there are astrochemists and even astrobiologists. Plate tectonics is about how the continents and ocean depths change their shape over the eons: basically geology, it has applications in petroleum and mineral exploration, weather forcasting, the origin of species, nuclear waste disposal, earthquakes, water resources, building standards, and so on.

Recent progress towards making solar energy economically attractive owes much to advances in electronics, which in turn stemmed from progress in solid state physics. Further achievements may come from biology — from studying how plants convert the sun's energy — much more efficiently than anything man has yet devised — but the biologists themselves will need to learn from chemists.

High-energy physics had lessons for cancer treatment and for nuclear fusion; successful heart transplants probably depend on biochemists revealing how the body rejects foreign tissue; laser developments mean that photonics (based on the particle of light) may replace part of electronics (based on the electron); sedimentologists, who study mud, shed light on many sciences; economists who predict substitition economics might, with advantage, study chemistry . . .

Wanted: not a scientific Esperanto, but scientists able to explain things in as near plain English as other scientists and mere laymen might understand.

Most Beautiful of Them All?

I've waited a long time for the chance to tout my nomination for the most beautiful bird in British Columbia. Now, thanks to a telephone call from Terese Todd, that chance has come.

Terese had called a week or so ago to describe a magnificent "golden" duck that had stopped briefly on one of the little lakes near her home in the highlands. After drawing more details from her, I came to the conclusion that what Terese had seen was a drake Mandarin Duck.

But, hold on! Mandarin Ducks are birds of the lowlands of Japan, China and Manchuria, not of Victoria's Highlands!

Before the record-keepers run for their books, let me put their minds at ease — if Terese's bird was a Mandarin Duck, it was almost certainly an escapee from some nearby aviary. On the other hand, stranger things have happened. If wild European Wigeon can find their way from Siberia to southern Vancouver Island, why not Mandarin Ducks — from northern Japan?

The question is, of course, rhetorical. Terese's bird has not been seen since and even if it had been, proof of its origins might have been difficult.

But escapee or not, when the honor roll of avian beauty is called this striking little duck from the marshes of eastern Asia is bound to be right up with the leaders. So is the little Wood Duck, the Mandarin's North American counterpart and a frequently mentioned candidate for the title of the most beautiful bird in North America and, since it is a resident of British Columbia, for our most beautiful bird as well.

Certainly the Wood Duck would be my nomination on most days. But there are other days, days when six red, yellow and black Western Tanagers landed in an oak outside my kitchen window and for a few minutes lightened up my life. That day the Western Tanager would have won my beauty contest hands down.

Or the day when the kestrel mistook the handle of my temporarily unused spade for a perch and gave me an unforgettable moment of beauty as he insolently contemplated that shapeless human mass before him. That day the Kestrel would have been my winner.

Then there was the time a Grey Jay interrupted a noon-time snack deep in the forests of central Manitoba, miles from any other humans, by landing on my arm as I was about to bite into an apple. For the next few minutes, as the bird disdainfully ignored me and worked on the apple, I watched amazed and delighted. In those moments, my vote for beauty would have been marked Grey Jay.

My point, of course, is that beauty is as much time and place as it is color and shape. On any given day even the ubiquitous House Sparrow might earn my vote for beauty — given the right circumstances.

But today, after a session near the muddy tidal flats of Witty's Lagoon, my vote goes to one of my perennial favorites, a near-relative of the Mandarin Duck and Wood Duck, and one of a group of little ducks — the teal — known for their beauty. Today's nomination for British Columbia's most beautiful bird is our smallest duck, the Green-winged Teal.

Much of the Green-wing's appeal is in his spring finery, which includes, in addition to the emerald-green patch on each wing, a cinnamon head broken by a brilliant green crescent sweeping back from each eye, a sandy-buff breast lined with rich dark brown dots, and a grey body overlaid with fine black lines. But place the jewel-like qualities of these colors in the completely incongruous setting of the stinking, slimy, clinging muck of a tidal mud flat, and you have a real test of aesthetic appreciation.

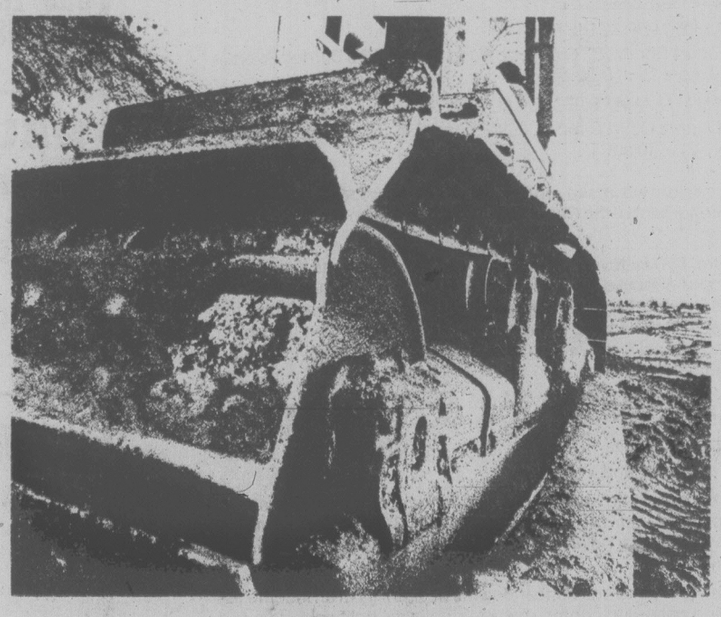
Yet, at this time of year, it is just this setting that we most often see our Green-wing Teals around Victoria. And it is in this setting, as the colorful little fellows push and slide about on the mud in search of succulent morsels hidden there, that we must appreciate their beauty.

And, despite the setting, in the golden light of an early morning in April the drake Green-winged Teal is still the most beautiful bird in the world — for today, at least.

SALT—for longer life, lower costs, more useable horsepower, less noise



A handful of abrasives can do more damage to your track than a quarry full of boulders. That's why you should instal Caterpillar Sealed and Lubricated Track (SALT) for longer track life in any high-abrasion or high-impact conditions.

SALT virtually eliminates internal pin and bushing wear by sealing abrasives out and lubricants in. And even when there are no abrasives, SALT guards against metal on metal wear so you get more maintenance free hours from your undercarriage.

Because friction is reduced, this original Cat design means more useable horsepower to turn the track; easier rebuild of rolling components and quieter operation. All of which adds up to lower operating costs and greater productivity from your Caterpillar track-type tractor or track loader.

SALT is one of many Finning and CAT PLUS support services available from 51 locations in B.C., the Yukon, and Mackenzie Valley, Northwest Territories. Let one of our product support specialists show you how to get the lowest cost per hour from your tracks.

Rail Union Council Against Line Closing

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Joint Council of Railway Unions has called on the provincial government not to follow a recommendation made by the royal commission on the British Columbia Railway to close the railway's line from Fort St. John to Fort Nelson in northeastern B.C.

The council, representing the unions certified to represent B.C. Rail workers met here Thursday.

Council president Norm Farley said that the extension was never designed to make money during its first few years.

"Closing it down is a sell-out, not only of the people of the north, but of all British Columbians," he said, adding that it would be a betrayal of all those who have pioneered the north and worked hard to develop the area.

Farley said closing the line would result in increased unemployment at a time when unemployment is at a record high.

Meanwhile, Fred Garnett, president of the Prince George Chamber of Commerce, said Prince George will "become the hub of a flat wheel" if the line is scrapped.

"I don't think the mills (in Fort Nelson) now operating will be shutting down, their products can be sent out by truck, but no new mills will be opening up," he said.

"It will affect everything (in Prince George) even the grocery stores, because people will stop coming here to service northern communities like Watson Lake and Fort Nelson."

Garnett said the provincial government's attitude against the development of northern B.C. would turn investors away from the province, to Alberta.

The chamber Wednesday sent a message to Premier Bill Bennett asking that the line not be closed.

The commission has said that closing the line would save the railway $60 million to $70 million during the next five years.

CUPE Ordered Back to Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board recommended Friday that another round of talks be held between the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Okanagan Mainline Municipality Labor Relations Association (OMMLRA) before any job action is taken.

The recommendation followed the most recent breakdown in talks over the method of arriving at a new contract for 1,100 union members affected in 10 Interior municipalities.

OMMLRA is striving for a single contract to cover all civic employees in the municipalities while the union seeks separate bargaining for each municipality.

Board vice-chairman Ed Peck said Friday that OMMLRA is in a legal position to execute a lockout order and rejected the union's contention that municipal bargainers were stalling negotiations. He said both sides may have been bargaining in bad faith.

The main dispute is contracting-out of jobs which the union says belong to union members.

Civic workers remained on strike at Revelstoke and municipal negotiators have threatened to lock out union members at the other Interior centres.

Abduction Charge Dismissed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A charge of child abduction against French citizen Andre Dulong was dismissed Friday in British Columbia provincial court.

Dulong, 44, was charged with abducting his daughter in March, 1975, and taking her back to France. The mother, Lorendana Weichel of Vancouver, subsequently went to France and brought the child, now five, back to Vancouver.

Judge Gordon Johnson said because of language difficulties he was not satisfied Dulong was aware of an interim family court order that gave custody to the mother, issued four days before the alleged abduction.

Johnson said Dulong left Canada with the child believing neither parent had the exclusive right to her care and control.

Following the decision, Dulong said he felt no bitterness toward his former wife, but wants to see his child.

PWA Strikers Get Support

CALGARY (CP) — Unions representing flight attendants and aircraft machinists employed by Pacific Western Airlines are supporting ground personnel who have been on strike against the Alberta-government airline for the last three weeks, it was announced Friday.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Airline Flight Attendants Association and International Association of Machinists said their memberships have been asked to refuse to cross picket lines set up by the ground staff, represented by the Canadian Airline Employees Association, at airports in Western Canada.

However, a PWA spokesman said the action is having "minimal effect" and flights are departing from Calgary as normal.

Dave Hagel, machinists' business agent, said the call to respect the picket lines went out Wednesday following a meeting between the three unions.

He said about 80 per cent of the machinists who are responsible for mechanical maintenance of aircraft have responded to the call and are not crossing lines at the airline's major service centres at Vancouver and Edmonton.

He said the number of machinists honoring the picket lines prior appeal by union leaders was about 50 per cent.

"We still have some members crossing, but we still have a legal binding contract with the company so we cannot order the members out," he said.

"We are asking that they respect the lines."

English Class Hike Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia English Teachers' Association passed a recommendation Thursday that the B.C. Teachers' Federation study the feasibility of increasing secondary school English teaching time and providing extra marking time for teachers.

Delegates to the association's annual general meeting also said they want their classes limited to 25 students.

Retired teacher Anna Cail, of Vernon, who moved the recommendation, said reading, writing, speaking and listening skills affect a student's success in many areas of school study and adult life.

"Competency of secondary-school graduates in these skills, although not necessarily lower on the average than in former years, is certainly in many cases inadequate to cope with the complex needs of the world today and of the future," she said. "Many English teachers are well able to teach these difficult skills effectively, but are hampered by too little time and too many students."

She added that criticism of the public education system is based largely on student shortcomings in English.

She said in an interview that if teachers were given double time to teach English in at least two secondary grades, students would have a greater opportunity to gain a good grasp on the language.

She said many excellent English teachers become discouraged because they have too many classes, too many students, and not enough time to both teach and mark papers.

Meanwhile,the former associate dean of the University of British Columbia said Friday educators must utilize the culture of television in order to stimulate their students.

Roy Bentley told a conference of 500 English teachers from Canada and the United States that children may witness thousands of assaults and murders on television, but they also broaden their vocabulary through the visual media.

Television provides continual programing for early childhood education, said Bentley. "It has literally altered out perception of the world."

Bentley, who is studying Canada's teacher education programs, said in a later interview that today's child is better informed than ever. The high failure rates in university English exams are due to the growing number of students who stay in school and increase university enrolment, he said.

Judgment Reserved On Mayor's Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Court of Appeal reserved judgment Thursday on defence and Crown appeals filed in connection with the conviction last June of Courtenay Mayor Bill Moore on a charge of obstructing justice.

Moore, who surrendered to sheriff's officers before court convened, was released on his own recognizance pending the appeal.

He was sentenced earlier to three months in jail and fined $1,000 by a Nanaimo court for obstructing justice but was found not guilty on two counts of perjury. He was released on $1,000 bail.

The charges stemmed from a previous trial in 1976 when Moore was found guilty of impaired driving after testifying that his wife was behind the wheel.

Lawer Jim Hogan, acting for Moore, said his client's conviction should be overturned because the charge of obstructing justice should never have been laid in the first place.

He also argued that the trial judge was in error by allowing a statement of Moore's previous impaired conviction to be heard by the jury without putting the evidence in context.

Asbestos Corp.

Asbestos Corporation Ltd. reports consolidated net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1977 of $21,021,146, or $7.40 a share, compared with $20,422,069, or $7.19 a share, for the corresponding period in 1976.

Sales in 1977 totalled $145,344,178, compared with $151,368,425 in 1976.

During 1977, the company's overall debt position was reduced from $27,243,000 at the end of 1976 to $20,550,000 at the end of 1977.

Capital expenditures totalling $22,831,000 in 1977 were financed entirely through operating revenues. The company reports about one-half of this expeniture was to improve working conditions in its plants and adjacent areas and the remainder was to modify and relace equipment and facilties.

Working capital increased to $60,688,276 in 1977 from $59,017,398 in 1976, an increase of $1,671,000.

Total assets of Asbestos Corp. Ltd. and subsidiary companies increased to $228,676,080 in 1977, from $220,093,010 in 1976.

On October 21, 1977, the Quebec government announced its intention to acquire control of the company, intitially through the purchase of shares held by General Dynamics, the parent company, and subsequently through the acquisition of all other shares. The take-over is pending.

IBM

IBM, based in Armonk, N.Y., said first-quarter earnings rose to $589 million, or $4.01 a share, from $573 million, or $3.82 a share, a year before. Revenue rose to $4.432 billion from $4.09 billion.

"Outright purchases of data processing equipment showed a modest gain over the first three months of 1977, but a substantial decrease from the record amount in last year's fourth quarter," said IBM chairman Frank Cary.

"A further weakening of the U.S. dollar in relation to many major currencies resulted in a foreign currency exchange gain of $30 million in the first quarter," he said.

Falconbridge

Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., with a large "and somewhat unmanageable" inventory, may have to reduce further its Sudbury, Ont., production this year, chairman Marsh Cooper said.

However, he told the annual meeting of shareholders the company is continuing to monitor the market situation closely and it is hoped operations will return to favorable levels.

As reported earlier, Falconbridge lost $29.2 million or $6.23 a share in 1977 before an extraordinary gain of $20.2 million from the sale of shares of Alminex Ltd.

The consolidated loss after the extraordinary item was $8.98 million or $2.15 a share compared with a profit of $14.70 million or $2.96 the previous year.

Burroughs

Burroughs reported net earnings were $33.5 million, or 82 cents a share, up from $28.4 million, or 70 cents a share, in 1977. The Detroit-based manufacturer said revenue climbed to $505 million from $443 million.

Burroughs chairman Paul Mirabito said incoming orders in the quarter were a record 15-per-cent above the year-ago level. He did not disclose comparable figures.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Jail Escape Charge Fails

Three charges against four men were dismissed in county court Friday in the fifth day of their trial.

Judge Richard Low ruled there was no evidence, in the absence of proof of warrants of committal to jail, that the men were in lawful custody.

Russell Allan King, 22, Roderick Maher, 44, Lloyd Alvin Moffat, 22, and Robert Lawrence Paul, 35, had been accused of escaping lawful custody at William Head Institution Sept. 5 and being unlawfully at large from the same jail on the same date.

They had also been accused of being unlawfully at large from William Head Institution Sept. 6.

However, all four men remain accused of escaping lawful custody in the city Sept. 6 in connection with running from a provincial courtroom on Fisgard Street.

Three of the men, King, Moffat and Paul, are also accused of truck theft in the city Sept. 6 and possession of a stolen truck on the same date in Saanich.

Trial was adjourned to May 12.

Low said in his admissibility ruling that the prosecution tendered warrants of committal to jail and attempted to prove them according to common law principles through its witness Dawn Jauschnigg, who was sentence administrator at William Head last September.

But this did not comply with the "best evidence rule" and the warrants must be proved by those who made the documents and not by someone who subsequently received them, he said.

Low rejected a defence argument that the new Canadian Human Rights Act prevents the prosecution from proving lawful custody because the men must be consulted and consent before use can be made of personal information for an administrative purpose.

He said that section of the new law has no application to criminal proceedings because the use by courts of personal information has always been allowed by law.

After Low ruled there is no evidence of lawful custody on three of the counts, defence counsel Michael Rhodes of New Westminster, representing Maher, Moffat and Paul, called Moffat to testify.

He said it was his opinion in September, 1977, that he was not in lawful custody because he should have been granted parole. He produced a copy of a letter from the parole board dated March 3, 1978, which apologized for saying earlier that his earliest parole release date was March 3, 1978, and that it should have been March 3, 1976.

He told of boarding a raft at the prison with three other men Sept. 5 and being apprehended by authorities. He said he thought he was simply being transferred to B.C. Penitentiary when they were taken to city police cells.

In provincial court, he said he anticipated a charge being read but said no charge was read the following morning.

He later received a phone call from a friend in which he said a vehicle was waiting for him at a specific location with clothes in it and keys in the ignition.

He said he ran from the courtroom with two others, got in the truck, drove away and was stopped by police about 10 minutes later.

He said the person phoning him said it was a rented truck and he denied it crossed his mind that it might be stolen.

Cross-examined by Crown counsel Richard Law, Moffat was asked, when he was at William Head last September, that he knew he was to stay in jail until 1978.

"That was the state of the information but I thought I could change it. Yes, that was officially the state of the information," he said.

Asked if he knew he shouldn't leave William Head without permission, he said "yes, I believed I shouldn't leave."

But he also said he believed at that time that his parole eligibility time was up and that the sentence which was holding him in jail was an illegal one.

Asked if he thought he could "up and leave," Moffat replied "I thought I could."

He agreed that he thought he could escape from the courthouse because of his belief that he was not being properly held and because he was being wrongly held.

Health Standards Defended

VANCOUVER (CP) — Health Minister Bob McClelland said Thursday he does not believe that budget cutbacks are having a negative effect on health.

McClelland told a meeting of the British Columbia Operating Nurses he needed more evidence before he would agree with critics, including the Registered Nurses Association, that the cut-backs are heaving a negative effect on health care.

"I don't accept that," he said. "Cost control is being interpreted as cost avoidance. I asked for evidence and I was told that one operating room is forced to use linen with six patches on it."

B.C. Ends Federal Rent Aid Plan

The Socred government's involvement in the federal-provincial Assisted Rental Program (ARP) will end this month, Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday.

As well, Curtis said, the province eventually intends to end its involvement in the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

Curtis told the legislature that no new applications for ARP will be received after April 30.

"In view of consultations with the federal government, I expect an announcment from Ottawa within days which will preclude this province's participation in the program," he said during budget speech debate.

"However, this ministry intends to honor those commitments for ARP which have been made to April 30. Benefits which flow from this program will continue over the next year."

The program was introduced in 1976 to provide financial incentives to private developers to build rental housing for their own management.

ARP combines the federal assistance provided by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) with additional assistance from the provincial government up to a ceiling of $9,200 a year in grants and loans for each new unit built.

"The program has been overwhelmingly successful," Curtis said. "The recent stablization os rents and increase in vacancy rates now allow renters a wide-ranging choice of accommodation and expenditure."

The minister did not say what shape the program would take after the province withdraws.

Curtis also said that the new Family First Home Program, announced in the budget on Monday, eventually will replace the province's participation in AHOP.

The minister disclosed in his speech that the new program, which provides a $2,500 grant for first-time home buyers with children, became effective on April 10.

AHOP combines funds provided by the CMHC with funds from the province to provide a grant of $1,000 to low and moderate-income families to enable them to purchase low or moderately-priced houses.

"The $1,000 grant will remain in place for those home buyers who do not qualify under the new plan," Curtis said. "AHOP will continue unchanged at this time.

"The new Family First Home Program is designed for today's housing market. Eventually it will replace the provincial AHOP program, but this will be done . . . to honor our commitments under AHOP to builders or homes which have not yet been sold."

Forests Deputy Named

Forests Minister Tom Waterland announced Friday the appointment of T. Michael Apsey as his new deputy minister, effective June 1.

Apsey was a member of the forest policy advisory committee which helped plan the new forest legislation to be introduced in early May, Waterland said in a news release. The committee will be disbanded on April 30, he said.

Apsey's appointment follows the retirement of former deputy minister John Stokes on March 31.

Waterland also announced the appointment of a special forestry advisor, Ted Young, effective May 1. Young is currently chief forester of the B.C. forest service.

Assistant chief forester Ralph Robbins will become acting chief on May 1 until the new deputy minister assumes his duties and appoints senior staff members in a new forest service organizational structure, Waterland said.

The minister also announced the establishment of a Vancouver Island forest district, the first step in the decentralizing and restructuring of the forest service.

"The new legislation and policies, these key ministry appointments, and the coming re-structuring of the forest service are changes in the interest of stimulating fresh approaches to joint industry-government problems and better administrative efficiencies," Waterland said.

SC Budget 'Cruel Jab'

A non-confidence motion saying that the Socred budget fails to ease taxes or unemployment was debated in the legislature Friday.

Bill King (NDP Revelstoke-Slocan) introduced the motion.

King said the budget, introduced by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe Monday, missed its opportunity to make amends for the harsh treatment British Columbians have received over the past two and a half years.

The NDP house leader said Wolfe's boast that B.C. is the economic bright spot in the country is a "cruel jab" at the more than 110,000 unemployed in B.C. and at the thousands of students who have little hope of finding jobs this summer.

The Social Credit government is fantasizing if it expects the public to look at the budget and believe the province is a bright spot, he said.

He told the story of a Victoria plumber who in 1975 had a small but thriving business employing five people.

But the ensuing construction slump was so bad, he has now decided to get out of his business and leave the country.

King said his move won't show up on any bankruptcy or unemployment figures, and suggested every MLA in the house knows of at least five similar cases.

King's non-confidence motion also contains mention of the $215 million overrun rung up by the Social Credit government in the fiscal year just ended.

It's useless to debate estimates, he said, if the government has no intention of sticking to them.

Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) in seconding King's motion said the government members are not the money managers they would like the province to believe.

Sanford said B.C. has an over-run government which runs over its citizens through excessive taxes and costs, and then runs away.

"They can't even come within $215 million of a budget that they drew up," she said, adding that the Socreds are not money managers.

SPILLED OIL IDENTIFIED AS PULP MILL'S

SECHELT (CP) — Samples of oil taken from Howe Sound after an oil spill last September matched a sample taken the same day from the Canadian Forest Products Ltd.'s Port Mellon pulp mill, Stanley Brynjolfson, environment ministry scientist, testified Thursday in provincial court.

The company is charged with depositing harmful substances in waters frequented by fish.

Brynjolfson told Judge J. S. P. Johnson that after an analysis of three samples given to him, he concluded that the substance contained in the samples was of the same composition and appeared to be of the same type.

"It appeared to be a heavy fuel oil, heavy diesel oil or bunker oil," he said.

A previous witness from the pollution control branch testified he obtained the three samples near the Port Mellon mill last Sept. 15.

Robert Hodges, an engineering assistant, said he obtained one sample from the waters about two miles south of the pulp mill, another from the waters directly outside the mill and the third from a pipe at the mill itself.

Company employee John Sanborn said there was a spill in the plant and in the steam-recovery area he observed heavy bunker oil leaking from a pipe.

Another employee, who was production manager at the plant at the time, testified that the oil leaked down the sewer pipes.

VOLUNTEER SEARCH UNIT ON WAY

A volunteer search and rescue unit similar to the Royal National Lifeboat Institute of Britain is expected to become operational on Vancouver Island in a few weeks.

Capt. Jack Ickringill, the transport ministry's coast guard rescue officer, said Friday Nanaimo is being considered as the location for the pilot project.

If successful, it would be expanded to Campbell River and other island communities.

The organization in the United Kingdowm has about 600 regular and 8,000 auxiliary coast guard members for search and rescue operations around the 2,500-mile coastline of Britain and Ireland.

Lookouts and rescue stations are manned around the clock.

Ickringill said the unit planned for Nanaimo would have only one paid employee - the coxswain. The remainder would be volunteers.

It would operate along the same lines as a volunteer fire department, he said.

STOL Shuttle Service Report Due in Fall

A feasibility study of a Short Takeoff and Landing (STOL) aircraft service between Victoria and Vancouver will be completed by the end of September.

The study has been launched by the federal department of transport and the department of industry, trade and commerce.

The B.C. ministry of energy, transport and communications is also involved.

A 2,000-foot landing strip will be required for such a service.

Last fall Victoria Chamber of Commerce officials, civic and provincial officials toured possible sites for the strip and suggested Macaulay Point in Esquimalt.

But this met with strong opposition from Esquimalt aldermen.

Other sites mentioned were near Ogden Point and near Carey Road in Saanich.

SIERRA CLUB PRAISES LOG BAN

The Victoria Sierra Club praised federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc Friday for stressing the need for a strengthened policy to protect river estuaries.

Club president Bruce Hardy said LeBlanc clearly showed logging companies do not have to use estuaries to boom their logs and can stack them on land instead.

"Scientific studies have shown this to be the case."

LeBlanc refuted a claim by the logging industry that estuarine log storage is necessary because of log damage which would result from marine woodboring insects in saltwater.

2,4-D '98% Effective' on Milfoil

Herbicides such as 2,4-D are necessary to prevent the proliferation of Eurasian milfoil in the Okanagan Lake system, says a report prepared by the environment ministry's water investigations branch.

"Without the judicious use of herbicides, there appears to be no way of preventing the continued expansion of the water milfoil nuisance," the report says.

The report, which presents the results of the controversial application of the herbicide in Okanagan lakes last summer, said 2,4-D was 98 per cent effective.

Despite opposition to use of the herbicide from many groups in the area, the report says 2,4-D will be an important part of future weed eradication programs.

"In large populations, herbicides can be applied efficiently to treat the entire population in a matter of days. Mechanical removal would take months or might be impossible because of water depth or obstacles."

The report says mechanical devices remove all vegetation but leaves bottom sediments vacant for rapid re-infestation.

"The herbicide 2,4-D has proven to be selective for water milfoil, leaving nonnuisance plants to proliferate and providing a more permanent removal of water milfoil."

It says combined chemical and mechanical control programs would have to be followed for several years before mechanical means alone would be sufficient to control the problem.

The studies found that 2,4-D was effective in killing both roots and stems of the plant in low-density milfoil populations and in areas where there is little water movement.

In high density areas, some plants were not killed by a single application, but growth was halted and the population was thinned out.

"Single treatments in two consecutive years eliminated 98 per cent of the water milfoil in test plots."

ELECTRONIC MAIL BY 1980s?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says it may offer the public in the 1980s an electronic message service that would cut delivery time and costs over traditional mail.

"We could have next-day delivery to probably 95 per cent of the population by inserting a new technology into our present system," Assistant Postmaster General John J. Wise told a House post office subcommittee.

Wise said no decision has been made on whether to offer the electronic service.

Under the potential service, consumers could bring their message to a post office, where it would be transmitted by satellite or land line to the distant post office. The message would then be reconverted from digital to paper form and delivered with the next day's mail.

"It would reduce our costs because we could reduce our manpower," Postmaster General William F. Bolger told the subcommittee. Wise estimated that only one-fourth of the manpower would be needed for processing electronic messages that are needed under the current system.

Bolger recently announced an $895,000 contract with Communications Satellite Corp. to test an international system for sending electronic messages. After the test, the Postal Service is expected to decide whether to offer it commercially.

Wise said the Postal Service foresees "an initial operating capability by 1985 and a mature system by 1990."

Moro Gang Admits Jail Guard Slaying

TURIN, Italy (Reuter) — The terrorist kidnappers of former Italian premier Aldo Moro broke a week of silence today with a communique claiming responsibility for the murder of a prison guard.

The four-page communique, found in a telephone booth in a Turin suburb, said Red Brigades gunmen killed the guard, Lorenzo Cutogno, on Tuesday because he was a "sadist and thug."

The communique also referred to the "proletariat trial" of Moro, kidnapped March 16, but gave no new details of his fate.

The communique also admitted that Cristoforo Piancone, 28, who was dumped outside a Turin hospital with gunshot wounds suffered when Cutogno fired back at his assailants, was a Red Brigades activist.

The Red Brigades said their wounded comrade was to be treated as a prisoner of war and that hospital and law officials were held responsible for his life.

Cutugno was a guard at the Turin jail where 15 Red Brigades guerrillas now on trial are being held.

"He was known throughout the prison for his sadism and he was a member of the notorious thugs' squad," the communique said.

The message attacked Italian authorities for their treatment of those it described as prisoners of war and compared their circumstances with the confinement of Moro.

REBELS JOIN TALKS

DAR ES SALAAM (AP) — Rhodesian guerrilla leaders agreed today to attend an all-party conference to negotiate bringing black majority rule to the African country.

Their acceptance was announced after talks with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen.

A British spokesman said the hope was to hold the conference later this month or in May at a site to be determined.

Violence In India Lambasted

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian President Sanjiva Reddy appealed Friday for an end to violent demonstrations which have killed 68 people and injured hundreds in the last few weeks.

Opening an opening ceremoony at the All-Indian Institute of Medical Sciences here, Reddy said all the political parties must sit together and take steps to help the country move ahead peacefully.

Twenty-eight persons were killed and more than 140 injured in fierce clashes in Amritsar and Pantnagar Thursday, but the two north Indian cities returned to normal Friday.

Church Pleas Ignored, Abortion Gets Backing

ROME (Reuter) — Italy's chamber of deputies voted Friday night to make abortion available on request despite strenuous Roman Catholic opposition.

If the new legislation is approved as expected by the Senate, the Italian abortion law will be as liberal as anywhere in Western Europe or the United States.

The favorable vote followed a 30-hour filibuster by the tiny Radical party which said the reform did not go far enough.

Present restrictions force thousands of Italian women every year to undergo often deadly illegal abortions or travel abroad to end unwanted pregnancies.

Hong Kong Route Vetoed

LONDON (CP) — British airlines are seeking a direct Hong Kong-to-Vancouver route, but they didn't get it at Canada-United Kingdom air talks which ended here today.

"There were no decisions whatsoever," said Ralph Collins, head of Canada's delegation, just before leaving for Ottawa.

"This was just a preliminary round."

"So far as we are concerned, this was almost entirely a listening round."

British officials are seeking to reopen the Canada-UK air agreement which has not been reviewed since 1969. Among their requests is access to certain unspecified western Canada points.

Winnipeg and Edmonton have been mentioned outside the formal discussions.

"We accepted an invitation from the British to hear what they had to say concerning possible revisions," Collins said in an interview.

"They foresaw problems for the future with development of traffic as the situation has changed over the years:

"We have agreed to meet again after an opportunity to consider their presentation and establish a position on our side."

One of the subjects high on the British list was the issue of Canadian charter regulations, described by a British spokesman as "rigid and hidebound."

British negotiators, recently back from successful bilateral talks with the United States, would like Canada to reduce to 21 days the current 45-day advance-booking regulation, a point Britain negotiated successfully with the U.S.

Britain also would like to see Air Canada move its British operation from London Heathrow airport to Gatwick airport, 40 miles south.

This, said Collins, is subject for further talks with Air Canada.

ALBERTA'S SWINGIN' SUMMER
It starts in early July, with the world's biggest rodeo — the Calgary Stampede. But it's more than a rodeo. Hang onto your Stetson while you ride ferris wheels and rocket rides, take in chuckwagon races, stage shows, casinos, comedians, singing and dancing acts, and carry on till all hours in nightspots. For ten days you can enjoy pancake breakfasts served from a chuckwagon, square dance in the streets, and songs like Home on the Range become singalong hits again.
It's wild. It's carefree. And a million people get caught up in the fun. You will too.
But that's only the beginning. Take a couple of days to catch your breath, then head to Edmonton for Klondike Days — a chance to relive the Gold Rush - Gay '90s era. Residents and visitors alike dress up in silk vests, top hats, cutaway coats, spats, or ostrich plumes, bustles, parasols. Overnight the city becomes populated with Klondike Kates, sourdoughs and riverboat gamblers. Crowds form around roulette tables in the casinos. Others take their chances at the horse races. And you can enjoy every part of it — the infamous raft and bathtub races, the midway, the nightly Coliseum of Stars, carnival and cabaret — even a promenade to show off your finery.
It's another mammoth party. And you're invited.
There isn't another celebration like it in North America. Three weeks of excitement, action and non-stop enjoyment packed into July. You can make it your entire vacation, or part of your holiday. Plan to join the dress-up crowd and get your outfit here. We suggest you reserve early. Calgary and Edmonton are alive for the Stampede and Klondike Days, and tickets and accommodations are in high demand.
See you at the party.

Que. Demands Full Tax Subsidy

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau says he will insist that Ottawa pay a $220-million subsidy for the province's selective sales tax cuts.

"This money belongs to us," Parizeau told a news conference Friday. "For once everyone is in agreement" on this point.

Quebec has refused to comply with Ottawa's tax plan outlined in Monday's federal budget, instead deciding to cut taxes on certain goods only.

Under federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien's original proposal, Quebec would have received a $220-million subsidy for reducing the sales tax by two or three per cent. But on Thursday he said Quebec would only get a $37-million subsidy for the provincial plan, which eliminates the eight-per-cent sales tax on shoes, clothing and furniture for 50 weeks.

The Ottawa plan, which every province but Quebec has accepted, will subsidize the provinces for two-thirds of the cost of reducing the taxes by two or three per cent.

Chretien has refused to subsidize the Quebec plan because he contends it favors mainly Quebec-based industries, while the other provinces have accepted across-the-board sales-tax cuts.

But Parizeau said Friday, "Well-ordered charity begins at home." He said he would see what happens before "taking up with Ottawa the means of recuperating that which is coming to us."

In the interval, "I ask all Quebecers and the institutions which represent them to show their support for the steps taken by the Quebec government. Partisanship has no place here. It's necessary to support good sense."

Tories 'Distort' Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservatives were accused Friday of using distorted figures to attack the government budget.

Treasury Board President Robert Andras made the charge in the Commons, leading off the third day of debate on the budget.

He said Conservative financial critic Sinclair Stevens exaggerated the growth of the public service in order to make his party's proposed cuts in government growth appear more attractive.

Andras said that Stevens said this week the public service grew by 300,000 persons since Prime Minister Trudeau took office 10 years ago.

Stevens confirmed in an interview that he had said public service employment increased to 580,000 in 1977 from 280,000 a decade earlier.

"I am puzzled to know why he (Stevens) conveniently left all the members of the armed forces and Crown corporations out of his 1967 figure, but why they all turned up in his 1977 figure," Andras said.

"I am not sure if this is poor research or absolute chicanery."

He also accused Stevens of distorting the statistics about government spending by claiming the government exceeded its 1977-78 forecast by $1 billion, when in fact, the government had underspent its forecast by $200 million.

"I forgive him. . . Maybe he just read the wrong line in the book," said Andras. "However, it is a distortion of the facts to say that total spending was over budget."

Andras said the Conservative proposal to cut income taxes by $2 billion is nonsense.

"They don't know what they're talking about. What programs would they cut? Precisely where would the money come from?"

Stevens said in an interview that it is true employees of such government companies as Petro-Canada, de Havilland, Canadair and Connaught Laboratories were included in the 1977 figure, but not in the earlier one.

He said he feels it is fair to include such workers in his comparison because the government now admits they are on its payroll.

"We're not adding anyone the government hasn't included itself."

Stevens was unable to say whether his government employment figures included members of the armed forces.

"But I will say this. We don't back up one inch on our figures. I am satisfied our figures for both years are comparable."

Andras said he supports the idea of controlling government growth, but is convinced it has to be done gradually and responsibly.

"We don't want to take Draconian measures, but we will have to deny submissions for new programs and cut back other programs," he said.

Telesat Orders $67M Satellites

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada signed a $67.3-million contract Friday with Hughes Aircraft Co. of the U.S. for three new communications satellites.

About $24 million of the work will be awarded to Canadian subcontractors.

Canadian firms are also to receive $5 million in Hughes subcontracts for other satellite-related business, a direct result of the new contract, Telesat and Hughes announced at a news conference. All costs are quoted in U.S. dollars.

David Golden, Telesat president, said it is impossible to predict total cost of the contract because of Canada's fluctuating dollar and a fixed series of payments the contract requires.

The dollar has been sliding steadily since November, 1976. It hit a 45-year low Thursday of 86.93.

Total cost of building, financing and launching the three satellites, called the Anik-C series, is expected to reach $110 million, another Telesat official said.

Negotiations with the U.S. National Aeronautic and Space Administration to launch the satellites in 1981 using the new space shuttle have not been completed, he said.

Golden would not comment on published reports that Telesat, which is half owned by the federal government, was under government pressure to increase from earlier proposals the work Canadian firms would receive.

Provinces Join In Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — Five provinces had indicated by Friday that they will intervene in the Supreme Court of Canada appeal against closure of the Keable Commission in Quebec.

A court official said British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and New Brunswick filed notices saying they intend to take part when the appeal is heard May 23. The Quebec and federal governments already are main participants in the case.

Friday was the deadline for intervenors to give notice, but others can apply for permission later.

The commission, investigating RCMP illegal activities in Quebec, was shut down Feb. 21 when the Quebec Court of Appeal ruled that Keable infringed on federal government authority by trying to subpoena documents from a federal cabinet minister.

Can't Remember

TORONTO (CP) — John Turner, former solicitor-general, said Friday he cannot recall being told the RCMP planned a break-in in Vancouver in 1968 to plant an electronic eavesdropping device.

The RCMP says documents filed this week with a commission of inquiry into the force suggest that Turner and T. D. MacDonald, former deputy solicitor-general, were informed by the RCMP about the break-in plans.

Natural Birth Control Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Two of the oldest women's organizations in the country Friday urged the government to step up promotion of natural contraceptive methods on grounds birth control pills present health hazards and abortions are increasing.

The National Council of Women and the Catholic Women's League also asked the government to get violence off television as they presented separate series of wide-ranging proposals at meetings with federal cabinet ministers.

Health Minister Monique Begin said she plans to ask the federally-financed Medical Research Council to increase birth control research but so far there are no safe, reliable natural methods so "I'm not going to promote it."

The council specifically asked the government to direct scientists to develop "a simple instrument that could be used by the least literate and the least sophisticated of women to determine easily and accurately when the fertile phase of her menstrual cycle begins and ends."

The league demanded an increase in what it called token government grants to natural family planning organizations because "there is an ever-increasing number of abortions being performed throughout Canada and the attitude is becoming more prevalent that abortion is an acceptable means of contraception."

Federal figures show nearly $800,000 spent by the federal government in the 1977-1978 fiscal year on family planning organizations. Nearly $200,000 went to Serena Canada which advocates natural contraceptive methods.

Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve said she agreed there is too much violence on television but "we cannot legislate violence off television. . . . that would be tantamount to censorship."

More Evicted By Gas Leak

ST. EUSTACHE, Que. (CP) — A row of houses and a commercial centre in this town adjacent to Montreal were evacuated Friday as the danger of further explosions from a mysterious gasoline leak continued.

A blast injured four men Wednesday, and although officials say the situation is partially under control, they still have not identified the source of the leak of gasoline into the town's sewerage.

Over 100 families were evacuated from their homes after Wednesday's explosion, and 40 to 50 of them were still not being allowed back Friday because of the danger. At about 11 a.m., it was decided to evacuate another row of houses and Place Sauve, the commercial complex.

Mayor Guy Belisle said the gasoline which had filtered into the sewerage and caused the explosion at a pumping station had been pumped out. But the fuel had again appeared in one section, so the row of houses were ordered evacuated until the situation is finally cleared up.

Inmates' Mail May Be Read

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Court of Appeal Friday upheld the right of prison authorities to open and read mail between a prisoner and his lawyer.

William (Billy) Solosky, a prisoner at Millhaven Penitentiary, had asked the court to declare that in his case, "all properly-identified items of solicitor-client correspondence should be forwarded to their respective destinations unopened."

Mr. Justice Darrel F. Heald, in a written judgment, said lawyer-client correspondence is privileged "only to the extent" that legal advice is given or sought.

Mr. Justice Heald quoted precedents to the effect that only by reading the mail could anyone determine whether or not it was privileged.

Granting the declaration Solosky sought would give him "an extension to the privilege afforded to the ordinary citizen."

The court wouldn't apply such a declaration to correspondence not yet written because it was "without jurisdiction to make declarations on purely hypothetical issues."

good investment opportunities," said Maurie Lanbelier, a partner in the Canadian Hotel in Surfside, a resort city north of Miami Beach that has attracted French-Canadians for weeks or months every winter.

"I tell them I'm not a real estate broker," added Lanbelier, who has also purchased a ranch near Tampa, where he boards race horses. "I can only refer them. I also tell them that there are no more bargains left."

The sense of urgency that has swept Canadians into the Florida market in the past year has escalated the price of income-producing properties along both the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

"There's too much money chasing too few deals," said another Canadian shocked by the sharp increase in prices in Miami. "The Americans know the Canadian buyer can't afford to wait around for the seller to lower his price because another Canadian will show up and take it away from him."

Traditionally, English-speaking Canadians and French-speaking Canadians have tended to live apart in Florida, just as they do back home. Quebecers prefer the Atlantic coast beaches and those from Ontario prefer the Gulf coast. Airline routes and interstate highways encourage this alignment.

Surfside has an annual French-Canadian day in March, French-Canadian entertainers are booked for the winter into certain local clubs, and the Montreal Delicatessen and Restaurant in Hallandale does a brisk business during the season, selling more than 400 dozen hand-rolled "Montreal" bagels daily.

Real estate brokers eager to cash in on the influx of Canadian money are now hiring French-speaking agents, and motels and apartments display "Bien Venue Canadiens" or "Ici Nous Parlons Francais" signs over front doors beneath Canadian flags.

There is a tendency for Canadians who are friends or already in business together in Montreal or Toronto to form partnerships to acquire investments that are too big to be undertaken alone. Lanbelier, for example, purchased the Canadian Hotel two years ago in partnership with a friend who holds a large real estate interest in Montreal. A few months ago his partner, who will not allow the use of his name because of "criticism" he may face back home, bought three office buildings on Lincoln Road Mall in Miami Beach and a medical building nearby.

Yvan Dubois, a former major league baseball "Bonus Baby" from Montreal who had become a wealthy real estate entrepreneur, is not convinced that heavy Canadian investment is a sign of failure of confidence in the Canadian future.

He and 10 partners recently bought the Hawaiian Inn on Motel Strip north of Miami Beach for $1.3 million, renaming it the Alujo Motel, but he said the move was a lifelong ambition and not a hedge against economic setbacks at home.

"Late last year I opened an indoor tennis club in the Laurentians that cost me =350,000," he said. "Would I be doing that if I felt that Canada was going down the drain?"

Food Experts Poisoned

MONTREAL (CP) — Health officials here have spent a busy week tracking down 170 nutrition specialists who suffered food poisoning at a conference last week.

Jean Marier, director of inspection services for the city, said it was unusual for such a high percentage of convention participants to get sick. There were 180 people present at the meeting, held to discuss the organization of food services.

The situation was especially serious because many of those affected work in institutional kitchens. Those who had returned to work despite their illness were asked to stay home to avoid spreading the disease, said Dr. Gisele Filion, responsible for control of contagious diseases in Montreal.

The cause was probably a chicken salad contaminated with salmonella, health inspectors said.

consultation with provincial governments.

The premiers feared the referendum tool could be abused, he said.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said the constitutional precedent for provincial consent to changes exists and the Western premiers do not want to see referendums substituted.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed was asked about the federal government using a referendum on separatism.

"It's one thing to be able to use this referendum procedure if a province initiates a referendum, not with something that's being contemplated by the constitution, but something that involves the issue of a separation from the country," he replied.

"I can see the validity of the federal government attempting to clarify something of that nature through a referendum after a provincial government initiated a referendum."

The premiers, in an earlier communique, criticized federal moves to lower provincial sales taxes. As Bennett put it, "it's not the measure it's the method."

They said they were unhappy about the move, which had an impact on their budgets, because there was no real consultation with them by the federal government. The matter should have at least been raised at the first ministers' conference in February.

UNLESS LeBLANC RELENTS

It's Sayonara Salmon For B Licence Holders

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The 1978 salmon season opens at midnight tonight and for 591 commercial fishermen, it will be their last unless Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc intercedes.

The fishermen involved hold B licences which first came into effect in 1968 when Jack Davis, then federal fisheries minister, decided to reduce the size of the fishing fleet.

Fishermen who had realized $1,250 or less in catches the previous season were given the option of taking out B instead of A licences on the understanding that the licences would be phased out after a 10-year period.

Of the 591 holding B licences, 107 took them out in 1968 and another 275 have taken them out since that time. A total of 209 have reverted from A to B licences.

The Pacific Trollers Association, with around 400 members who own their own boats, have petitioned LeBlanc to take a second look at phasing out B licences for those who took them out in 1968.

Most PTA members, however, have A licences.

PTA manager Fred Yeung of Vancouver says:

York . . . hopes for extension

"We have a very soft spot for those fishermen who, 10 years ago, thought that by now they could retire.

"For most of them the economy is forcing them to slug it out and go fishing. They certainly deserve special consideration."

"The fisheries had a review board two years after the transformation. The government is above any blame at all. They handled all cases fairly and leniently," he added.

Yeung says the PTA is not proposing any second look at B licence boats owned by companies or for B licences obtained since 1968.

But some fishermen who obtained their licence since 1968 are hoping for a reprieve by the minister.

Helped by his father, Doug, a retired fisherman, the younger York stopped work on his 34-foot troller Conny at Fishermen's Wharf at Erie Street, to state his case.

"I hope I get an extension on my licence," he said, adding he got out of fishing between 1973 and 1975 thinking he would try another kind of work.

He sold the 37-foot troller he had before Conny for $18,000. Now she would cost $60,000, including an A licence.

Dr. Chris Newton, director of the fisheries economic section in Vancuver, says the 1968 action was taken to eliminate part-time fishermen who did not rely on fishing for their livelihood.

York does and says he netted about $30,000 gross in 1977.

Should the minister not agree to an extension, people like York will find it virtually impossible to carry on.

When he sold his first boat, an A licence cost less than $1,000 a ton. The only way he could continue after this year would be to buy an A licence from another boat.

Other commercial fishermen confirmed these licences are so scarce that they are now only available at about $4,500 per ton, plus the price of a boat.

The deadline for taking out a commercial fishing licence is May 31 and, as they prepare their boats for their annual tussle with the sea, B licenced fishermen face an uncertain future.

Newton says the 1968 transformation succeeded in whittling down a salmon fleet that numbered some 6,700 boats.

He also agrees the 10-year cutoff will mean hardship for some.

"I hope we get a decision soon," he says.

Chevron Goes to Court Over Teamster Pickets

Chevron Canada Ltd. has launched a B.C. Supreme Court action against the Teamsters Union arising from a strike by employees of AirWest Airlines Ltd.

The oil company said Friday that Local 213 of the union has caused a breach of contract with the airline after it had agreed to sell petroleum products to AirWest.

Chevron asked for a court injunction restraining picketing at its Victoria premises and damages for causing a breach of contract between the plaintiff's employees and between Chevron and its customers in Victoria.

Teamsters union members are picketing the Chevron bulk plant at 319 Harbor in a bid to halt fuel deliveries to strikebound AirWest.

But the union action which began Friday will have little immediate impact on the airline's operations, an AirWest spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the company has about a month's supply of fuel in storage at the terminal in Victoria's Inner Harbor and about five month's supply on hand in Vancouver.

Wes Anderson, business agent for Local 213, says that picketing will be stepped up in an effort to pressure AirWest into settling the protracted labor dispute.

The Chevron plant has been the major supplier of fuel to AirWest here since Nov. 13 when 70 Teamsters members walked off the job after negotiations for a first contract with the airline broke down.

AirWest and the union had settled an agreement last week but when the sides could not agree on a back-to-work procedure, company president Norm Gold asked employees to come back under different terms.

FIREMEN TO STUDY CONTRACT MOVES

City firefighters are looking at other ways of resolving their contract dispute with the city before going to arbitration, union president Richard Brideson said Friday.

He said there will be a special meeting Sunday when the 115-member union will decide which direction to go.

Mediation efforts by Clark Gilmour broke off last Tuesday.

Gilmour has now withdrawn from the dispute which centres around the union's demand for a six-per-cent increase in salary and fringe benefits in a one-year agreement.

The city has offered a four-per-cent boost and Brideson said earlier this week management was even backing off on that proposal.

Parents Fight Closures

A group of parents have sent a telegram to Education Minister Pat McGeer asking for a meeting to discuss the Greater Victoria school board's decision to close Tolmie School and switch the Bank Street oral communication program to Margaret Jenkins school.

Glenna McNaught, president of the Bank Street parents' auxiliary and spokesman for the group, said parents are concerned about the effect of the decision by the board Thursday night.

She said the group has parents from Bank Street, Tolmie and Burnside schools and could be expanded to include parent representatives from all schools in the district.

The closure of Tolmie has forced relocation of special classes to other schools.

Mrs. McNaught said she feels this will create a hardship for handicapped children.

She charged the board with acting prematurely.

"We feel this school board is simply not listening to the public. Parents are becoming less and less influential, and in many schools there are no parents' organizations," she said.

Tourist Booth Proposal Gets Park Lovers Mad

A proposal to build a tourist booth in Goldstream Provincial Park has park lovers up in arms.

Charles Danbrook, owner of the Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford, who submitted the proposal to the government, said the booth already has tentative approval from Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf and support from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy.

The booth, a permanent structure, would be located in what is considered by park users as a beauty spot.

The site is located on the west side of the highway between the bridge and the first major bluff, near the start of the first major curve in the highway.

It takes in a part of the old Goldstream highway and is screened by an attractive stand of maples and young firs.

Roads would be required to serve the booth and the conservationists say it will displace a stand of tall Douglas firs flanking a small waterfall.

Herb Warren, former city parks administrator, and one of the province's best known horticulturists, said the move is the first step towards commercializing parks.

"I regret that Bawlf and McCarthy didn't have the courtesy to consult the Victoria Outdoor Club or the Victoria Amalgamated Conservation Society, who devoted many hours of time and money to protect and to improve the amenities of the park," he said.

The outdoor club built all the trails in the park and the VACS voluntarily feed fingerlings and enhance the salmon fishery in Goldsteam.

Brian Inglis, president of the VACS, said he is shocked to see ministers favor the despoiling of the area.

"Apart from a booth, it would mean installing toilet facilities and propane tanks for lighting," he said.

"Bawlf should know that roads and a building won't improve the park aesthetically."

Saanich Pushes Tardy Taxpayers

Saanich municipality has launched a crackdown on delinquent taxpayers.

Municipal tax collector Ken Middleton said Friday letters are being sent to 20 businesses which each owe more than $5,000 in back taxes.

The delinquents, the majority of whom are owners of office blocks and shopping centres and land speculators, have two weeks to pay or face court action, Middleton said.

The unpaid taxes owed by the 20 taxpayers amount to almost half of the $1 million in outstanding taxes due the municipality.

The total amount of outstanding taxes at the same time last year was just over $561,000.

Middleton attributed the increase in overdue taxes to the slump in the local economy.

He noted taxes prepaid in the first three months of the year amounted to $1,130,000, down $200,000 from last year.

He said the decline is probably due to council's decision to cut the interest rate on prepaid taxes from eight to seven per cent.

Middleton said writs will be issued against any delinquents who have not paid their taxes by the deadline, and they will be identified.

Security Guard Faces Charges

A 30-year-old private security guard will appear in provincial court May 17 charged with three counts of possession of stolen property.

The man, whose name has not been released, was arrested by Colwood RCMP Friday and released on an undertaking to appear in court.

It is alleged the guard, an employee of Uniguard Security, had CB radio equipment taken from an ICBC salvage yard, and a telephone, test equipment and other communications items taken from B.C. Tel.

Police have seized about 40 stolen items to date.

Mind Dynamics Man Makes Offer to Jobless

Guess I disturbed the peaceful thoughts of Mr. Mind Dynamics, John Kehoe, Wednesday night.

What can all this do for the average unemployed Canadian right now? I asked him when his free introductory lecture at The Empress was over.

"Everything," he replied.

"After taking this course, an unemployed person can set a goal of attaining a certain job. He will begin to use the power of thought to bring to him that job. And it would, there's no question about it!"

What did I think of the lecture? he asked me and I said it was interesting if a little vague. And I got the feeling that most of the 100 or so people who showed up (sending The Empress staff scampering to find extra chairs) felt the same way.

Briefly, what Kehoe told us was that we all, without realizing it, hold the key to success in our higher conscious mind, which we don't call on because we don't know it's there.

"This is not some abstract theory or wishful or positive thinking. It is a fact that we can use the powers and forces of our higher conscious mind to draw to us whatever we desire — material or spiritual things.

"We've never been told to look into our thoughts," he went on. "We're living so far below our potential and our capabilities and that's why we're having problems.

"The harsh, cruel fact is that the average man, woman and child will go through life without realizing what powers they have within them. We're asleep and blind unless we do discover these powers and forces within us.

"Your best friend and worst enemy — your own mind — keeps you from realizing these forces are within you. The higher conscious is the most important tool you can have in life. So much of our life is taken up with concern, anxieties, fantasies and worries about things that will never happen. And it is these things clattering around in our conscious mind that keep the higher conscious hidden from us.

"The higher conscious is another realm of awareness and getting in touch with it is one of the truly great tricks of life."

But pulling off this trick is not a simple thing, Kehoe told his audience. It is not easy to control and direct your thoughts. It takes work.

It also takes money, evidently, as he followed this up by saying his one-month course (which begins at 8 p.m. next Wednesday in room 1001 of the Chateau Victoria Hotel) costs $95.

It will include four evening lecture and study sessions and considerable "homework" involving exercises of the mind, he said. And at the end of that time your whole life will be changed around, he promised.

Quite a few of the people there believed him, this strange man who lives in the bush somewhere near Ladysmith. About 10 signed on for the course and several others obviously were teetering on the brink of decision. (If you are interested you can write Kehoe Box 1616 Ladysmith or phone him at the Chateau Victoria from noon next Wednesday).

"I'm no high pressure salesman," he said and somehow you can believe him. "The money is only secondary but I have to have some for travelling, for living. Mainly I'm just interested in sharing what I have found."

Kehoe, 31 and single, is suitably vague, too, about how he found what he has found.

"I'm not a professional

lecturer," he told his audience at the start of his fluent if not too eloquent talk. "But what I have to tell you is the result of seven years' work."

The man who had worked as an ambulance and taxi driver and as a salesman, was with an entertainment agency promoting rock bands in Toronto seven years ago when he received, while driving along in his car one night, "a flash" where he "perceived the whole world in a vastly different way."

That was him making contact with his higher conscious mind, he said, and now seven years later he is ready to tell others how this can be done.

John Kehoe went home happy Wednesday night. But it was obvious my remarks on the unemployed (and my pointing out that if they were out of work they almost certainly couldn't afford the $95 for the course, anyway) unsettled him. He phoned me the next morning.

"I want to make you an offer, Max," he said. "I will take 10 unemployed people at random. People who have been unable to find work. I'll let them take the course completely free of charge and then in four or five weeks' time we'll watch them secure jobs."

Okay, you unemployed, how does that grab you? If you're interested, write to me at The Times and Kehoe will pick out the names. He explained:

"The 10 will be test cases that will enable me to prove to The Times and to the people of Victoria that these powers of the mind do work."

Record Crowd Sees Cougars Tumble after Fortunate Start

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Cougars attracted a record crowd of 5,332 and were off and running with one of the strangest goals ever scored in Memorial Arena, but that pair of plusses wasn't enough to keep the team from falling into a bit of a hole in their Western Canada Hockey League playoff series with New Westminster Bruins.

The disciplined Bruins struck for five third-period goals to skate off with an 8-4 victory over the Cougars and a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Division final.

Teams meet again tonight in Vancouver's PNE Coliseum and return to Memorial Arena for game No. 4 on Sunday.

Glaring defensive breakdowns and an obvious weariness hurt the Cougars badly.

There wasn't a Victoria defenceman who wasn't stung for a New Westminster goal. They gambled at inopportune moments, concentrated too mightily on tying up rivals in front of the Victoria goal to such a degree that three Bruins — Boris Fistric, Brian Young and Kent Reardon — were able to walk in unchallenged to score, headmanned the puck poorly, and drove clearing passes directly on the sticks of New Westminster's point men that led to three goals.

While the defence suffered through a miserable evening, a weariness also seemed to affect the Cougars, as evidenced by New Westminster's five-goal burst in the final period.

Playing in their 83rd game of the year, exclusive of exhibitions, the Cougars almost appeared to lack conditioning. That's how it seemed, but the truth may lie with New Westminster's stronger bench.

Bruin coach Ernie McLean consistently utilized three lines and occasionally put a fourth into play. The fourth unit gave the Bruins a freshness the Cougars obviously lacked for the last 11 minutes of play, when New Westminster overcame a 4-3 deficit to run in the game's final five goals.

It was a big disappointment to the largest crowd ever to see a WCHL game here. Friday's head count was five more than the previous high of 5,327 set April 4, 1975, in a game against Kamloops Chiefs.

Of the game's 12 goals, the one they're still talking about is Victoria's opening score.

It came at 5:56 of the first period. Play was in the Victoria zone when referee Ian Sandercock signalled a delayed penalty against Cougar defenceman Kim Spencer. The Bruins had possession of the puck and rookie netminder Tom Semenchuk raced to the bench in favor of an extra attacker.

A New Westminster player in possession of the puck rifled a hard pass back to the Victoria blueline. The puck eluded both point-men and went the length of the ice into the empty Bruin net.

Had a Victoria player touched it, play would have been stopped. None but the Bruins touched it, and it was ruled a goal although the red light failed to go on. The goal judge said later that fans had jarred the connecting plug loose from the goal light.

That one, and subsequent scoring shots by Mike Shields, Denis Fenske and Robertson, gave Cougars their only bright moments.

While Victoria's defence had a bad night, they didn't get much help from the wingers. Robertson, Fenske and Gary Lupul, the team's three centres, skated themselves into exhaustion but Victoria wingers didn't help the cause by skating poorly and being constantly out of position.

REBOUNDS: Press box regulars honored Victoria captain Curt Fraser with a special trophy acknowledging his contribution in four years as a Cougar. . .Fraser graduates from junior rank as Victoria's leader in games played (265), goals (142), assists (181), points (323) and penalty minutes (610). . .Fraser had an excellent chance to send Cougars ahead by two goals early in the third when he broke away but shot the puck into the pads of New Westminster goaltender Richard Martens, who replaced Semenchuk after the Cougars scored their second goal. . .The Cougars also were on top, 4-3, when Victoria defenceman Leroy Heck straightened up Bruin forward John Paul Kelly with a crunching check at the three-minute mark of the third period. . .It was the only good check thrown by a Cougar all night. . .Kelly skated wobbily to the bench but the hit failed to insert any extra spark into Victoria's play. . .Elsewhere, Flin Flon Bombers and Billings Bighorns both jumped into 3-0 leads in other series. . .The Bombers edged Regina Pats 4-3 on Ray Markham's goal at 9:42 in overtime while Billings outlasted Medicine Hat Tigers 10-9.

'Lazy' Tendency A Buffalo Fault

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Sabres, beaten in the National Hockey League playoff quarter-finals the last two seasons, must win tonight to reach that round this year.

The Sabres are home against New York Rangers in the decisive game of their best-of-three preliminary-round series. A Sabres' victory would send them into the quarter-finals against Philadelphia Flyers; a loss would send them home.

The Sabres, losers to New York Islanders in their last two Stanley Cup challenges, lost to the Rangers 4-3 in overtime Thursday after winning the series opener 4-1 at home Tuesday.

"Now we'll just have to find out what we're made of," said Buffalo coach Marcel Pronovost.

The other three preliminary-round series were decided in two games, with Philadelphia Flyers ousting Colorado Rockies, Toronto Maple Leafs beating Los Angeles Kings and Detroit Red Wings eliminating Atlanta Flames.

The quarter-final matchups are not yet determined. The only thing certain is the best-of-seven round opens Monday at the home rinks of Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins, the Islanders and Flyers.

Buffalo, favored over the Rangers at the outset, has shown a season-long tendency to let down against the lesser teams.

The Sabres won their seasonal series against such powerful teams as Montreal, Boston and Philadelphia. But they lost twice to the lowly Cleveland Barons and once to Washington Capitals. They also were tied four times by Pittsburgh Penquins.

"We play a couple of good games in a row, then we expect everybody to just lie down and let us beat them," he said.

"We've been in tough pressure games and it seems we come up big in them," said Buffalo captain Danny Gare. "This is a proud hockey club."

Harness Meeting Bid Nears Signing Stage

Every day brings a change, and the latest news in the possibility of harness racing at Sandown Park is that a verbal agreement has been reached between officials of Orangeville Raceway and the B.C. Jockey Club, which owns Sandown, and that the papers should be signed next week.

Under the proposed new format there would be 54 days of racing with the standardbreds running four days a week from May 22 to Sept. 9. This will be the basis of an application to the B.C. Racing Commission, following which permission must be secured from the provincial and federal governments, plus of course approval of, and the necessary business licences from, the Municipality of North Saanich.

Improvements will be made to the track and the Capital City Turf Club is assured that the track will be in top condition for the opening of the thoroughbred season in mid-October. Stay tuned.

Meanwhile, it probably doesn't mean much in today's market place but, for the first time in 53 years, Scotty Hughes is out of a job. And that's different.

But it's likely to stay that way until fall and the ponies run at Sandown.

Scotty Hughes, you see, is one of the old guard of racing people in B.C. He's not that old, really, only 66, but that's too old and why he no longer is a steward at Exhibition Park in Vancouver; and already he misses the Commission job he held last year.

He was offered something else, declined, but still can't stay away from the place. After almost a lifetime in the business, who could?

And he was telling a story on opening night at Ex Park as he reached back into the past of some of those 53 years.

It seems that in the new shopping centre that is on the site of the old Lansdowne Race Track (and if you remember that, you're dated) there's a restaurant with a wall devoted to racing. And right there front and centre is a picture of Scotty Hughes on Forbeck in 1928, the year he won the derby, and on the very same site.

So his past is recorded for posterity, in print and naturally he's pleased about it.

But Hughes, who was one of the leading riders of his time in the province, is noted for other things connected with the sport of kings. And he once was headline material for not the usual reasons.

He came back to life after being pronounced "dead" after a nasty spill in Chicago.

A Vancouver paper of the time, The Morning Star, came out with a banner headline on the spill, proclaiming his demise, and embellished the epitaph with numerous accolades saying what a good guy he was.

That was in 1927. Scotty had broken his maiden at the old Tijuana Track in the 1926-27 winter season. He had gone on from there to be the leading rider at Omaha and Salt Lake City. His contract had been sold to J.W. Marchbank, who later was to build the Tanforan Race Track, and he was riding at Washington Park in Chicago.

The spill took place on the first turn. Six horses went down. Three were killed and Scotty's horse was almost sliced in half as it hit the railing.

When the doctors arrived, they pronounced Scotty dead and tossed him in the ambulance along with the injured. On the way to the hospital, something happened and Scotty suddenly was alive again. Not that he knew anything about it. He didn't because he was unconscious for three days.

One of the injured jockeys, a fellow named Walters, never rode again. He had suffered a broken back.

A few weeks later, Scotty was released. He returned to Vancouver to ride for Charlie Emmert. In 1928 he was the leading rider in the province and rode that derby winner he is pictured with in the restaurant.

Scotty continued to ride until 1936 before hanging up his tack for good.

He then went to work as a valet, working up to the position of steward he has held for several years, until this season.

City racing fans may be interested to hear that jockey Tommy Wolski is back. Wolski, who annually buys space in the Daily Racing Form to thank the patrons for their support during the season, did it again for opening day. His message read: "Here's wishing you fun and excitement and lots of winners this season." His California licence plate also displays the letters WOLSKI. And oh, yes, he won Wednesday's feature on Fighting Policy. So don't discount him.

STARS ROLL TO EASY WIN IN OPENER

MONTREAL — First United Stars of Victoria got away to an impressive start Friday in the opening round of the Riverdale international bantam girls' basketball tournament.

Unbeaten in their age group during the past three years, the Moe Turner-coached Stars overwhelmed Caledonia, Ont., Golden Hawks 94-30.

Marina Scott and Sue Walton each scored 22 points to spark the Victoria assault.

First United faces Ottawa and Three Rivers to complete the preliminary round-robin today. Finals of the thre-day tournament will be held Sunday.

Orioles Break Out

By Associated Press

Just when it looked like Baltimore might never win a game and Milwaukee might never lose one, the Orioles came up with a victory, and tagged the Brewers with a loss in American Baseball League action Friday.

Both teams had been perfect until Friday, the Brewers winning five straight games at home with an attack that was averaging almost 11 runs a game, and the Orioles dropping five in a row on the road, the first three to Milwaukee.

But on Friday, both streaks expired as the Orioles won 6-5 after wiping out a 4-0 Brewers lead and surviving a late Milwaukee comeback.

"There's nothing like home cooking and a couple of breaks," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver. A five-run third inning didn't hurt, either.

Lee May's looping two-run single capped Baltimore's five-run third inning which was helped along when first baseman Cecil Cooper and left fielder Larry Hisle both committed errors on Billy Smith's grounder.

In other American League games Friday, Toronto Blue Jays outlasted Detroit Tigers 10-8, Boston Red Sox beat Texas Rangers 5-4, Minnesota Twins defeated Seattle Mariners 14-5, Kansas City Royals beat Cleveland Indians 3-1 and Oakland A's edged California Angels 2-1.

In the National League, the hot West Division race continued with Los Angeles Dodgers scoring their fifth win in seven games while Cincinnati Reds won their seventh in eight starts.

Rick Monday hit his third home run of the season to help Los Angeles beat Atlanta Braves 5-1 while the Reds beat Houston Astros 8-4 with run-scoring hits by George Foster, Pete Rose, Dan Driessen plus Johnny Bench's homer.

Roy Eager to Start Car-Racing Season

The crowd-attracting International Drivers Challenge series and the Canada 200 race will highlight Western Speedway's silver anniversary season, and Roy Haslam can hardly wait.

Haslam, considered one of the best drivers developed on Vancouver Island, announced Friday that he will campaign in open stock car competition in Canada and the United States with an impressive new car.

It's a specially-improved Camaro 350.

Will it be the best Victoria-owned car ever to campaign in the Northwest?

"I hope so," said the 32-year-old Haslam.

Now being completed in Illinois, the car is sponsored by Garden City Motors and city businessman John Copp.

Despite an impressive record in recent years, Haslam bluntly admitted past successes were achieved with "a jalopy." Acquisition of a sponsor obviously delighted Haslam.

"No matter how good you are, you have to have good iron in order to compete against other drivers on their own level," said Haslam at a season-preparing luncheon. Haslam and his crew of Denny Rand, Dave Ferguson and Steve Copp will campaign extensively on the Island and throughout the Pacific Northwest but also have designs on participating in major events in California, Las Vegas and Nashville, Tenn.

Despite the major announcement, Haslam had to share Friday's limelight with Andy Cottyn. The one-time lumberjack, who almost single-handedly built Western Speedway in the early 1950s, was honored with a special award by the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association.

VITRA recognized Cottyn's contribution and dedication by presenting him with a plaque and introducing "The Andy Cottyn Appreciation Award" to be awarded annually to drivers winning a designated race.

The Speedway will officially launch its 25th season April 30.

There was one disappointing note struck at Friday's luncheon. That came with Western Speedway manager Tony Mortel's condemnation of a Liquor Administration Board ruling that forbids breweries from sponsoring motorsports events.

The ruling forced one brewery to withdraw as sponsor of a major championship series.

"Why penalize auto racing?" Mortel asked. "We don't sell liquor at the track as they do at horse-racing tracks. We don't encourage drinking. In fact, auto racing associations are among the prime proponents of safe driving."

The season's schedule:

April 16, 23, 27—practice open to public; April 30—season opener, stocks and super stocks; May 6—super stocks; May 13—super stocks; May 21-demolition car derbies; May 22—stock cars; May 27—open competition, super stocks; June 3—stocks; June 10—CAMRA and WRA sprints, super modifieds; June 17—Paul Ridell Thrill Show; June 24—stocks; June 28—NASCAR West Coast Grand Nationals; July 1—demolition cars; July 8—super stocks; July 15—stocks; July 18, 20—International Drivers Challenge; July 23—demolition cars; July 29—CAMRA and WRA sprint cars and super modifieds; July 29-30—International sports car conference race; Aug.5—stocks; Aug.7—stock cars and super stocks; Aug.12—open competition, super stocks; Aug. 19—Old timers night, super stocks; Aug.26—stocks; Sept. 2—stocks; Sept.4—demolition cars; Sept.9—super stocks; Sept. 15—Canada 200 time trials and qualifying races; Sept.16—Canada 200; Sept. 24—demolition car championship; Oct.1—Island series championship, stocks and super stocks.

Spaniard Impressive

"Amazing," he said. "Fantastic, remarkable, tremendous."

His praise was for Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, who is handling the tough, tour-tested American pros with the same ease he has dominated European golf the last two years.

"He's the closest thing to Arnold Palmer I've ever seen on the tour," Player said. "He has charisma and he's so strong. I played with him yesterday and he spent a lot of time in the rough. He literally tore the roots out of the ground, actually tore the roots out."

Winner of 19 international tournaments despite having just turned 21, Ballesteros wasn't exposed to so much rough Friday, but used his exceptional strength to advantage with a seven-under-par 65 in the second round of the $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

Combined with an opening 69, it gave him a 36-hole total of 134, 10 under par, and a three-stroke lead over one of golf's strongest fields.

Bill Kratzert, a first-time player in this event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour events from the last 12 months, was second with a 67—137.

Player was in third, 70-68--138.

Overtime Triumph Sends Barbarians Against Titans

Oak Bay Barbarians and the undefeated Victoria High Titans racked up semi-final victories Friday to advance to the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League's Howard Russell Cup final.

The teams will meet at Royal Athletic Park next Friday in the championship finale.

Barbarians overcame a stubborn and spunky Claremont team to score a 13-10 overtime victory while Vic High scored a convincing 21-4 decision over St. Michael's University School.

Paul Vaesen emerged as Oak Bay's hero, booting a penalty kick in the second 10-minute overtime to provide Barbarians with their winning margin.

Oak Bay led 6-0 at the half and boosted its advantage to 10-0 before the Ed Kubek-coached Claremont squad rallied in the second half to carry the favored Barbarians into overtime.

Jay Roberts scored two tries for Claremont, one of which was converted by Glen Prevost.

The kicking of Mark Wyatt sparked Titans. Wyatt booted two penalty goals and a drop goal to set the scoring pace. Duane Peleshati, Terry Siklenka and Mark Carindal went over for four-point tries. William Tsang's try accounted for all of St. Michael's scoring.

Meanwhile, Victoria's junior Crimson Tide came up with a sparkling and overpowering performance to drub the touring English Dragons 40-4 in an international exhibition.

Dragons wound up their six-game British Columbia tour with a 2-4 won-lost record. Vancouver Island teams administered three of the four losses.

Nelford Leads Despite Bogey

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Rookie pro Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C. shot a six-under-par 66 Friday for a one-stroke lead over veteran Tom Shaw in the first round of the rain-delayed $80,000 Tallahassee Open.

The 22-year-old Nelford, who now lives in Santa Monica, Calif., had seven birdies and bogeyed his last hole — the 440-yard ninth.

After Nelford played his round in the morning, the 35-year-old Shaw, a touring pro since 1963, found the greens to his liking in the afternoon, needing only 22 putts in posting a 67.

Another rookie Canadian on the tour, Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C., was at 68 along with Jeff Hewes, who regained his tour card last fall for the third time. Sammy Rachels and former tennis professional Frank Conner.

Canadians Win Opener

By Associated Press

Vancouver Canadians marked their debut in the Pacific Coast League Friday with a 4-0 win over the Hawaii Islanders in Hawaii.

In other league openers Friday, Tuscon Toros beat Albuquerque Dukes 10-6, Spokane Indians edged San Jose Missions' 7-6 and Tacoma Yankees blanked the Phoenix Giants 9-0.

Vancouver broke a scoreless tie in the seventh inning as Derrick Bryant singled home the first run. Vancouver added another run in the eighth on Larry Murray's triple and closed out the scoring with two in the ninth on a fielder's choice and an infield throwing error.

Norris was credited with the victory.

BULLS BOMBED IN SERIES OPENER

Intimidation Try Fails

By Canadian Press

Birmingham Bulls, as expected, tried their intimidation tactics against Winnipeg Jets Friday night but it backfired when the Jets scored five power-play goals and once on a penalty shot for a 9-3 win in a World Hockey Association playoff opener.

"We thought likely that if we got out on top they'd try something like this," left-winger Bobby Hull said of Birmingham's roughhouse antics. "I don't really think they even wanted to win the game. They just came out to try to intimidate us for the rest of the series. But that's the way they have to play it, I guess. As long as the score is like this every game we'll take it."

In another series opener Friday, New England Whalers beat Edmonton Oilers 6-4 at Springfield, Mass. Both of the best-of-seven quarter-final series resume Sunday while the third series, Quebec Nordiques vs. Houston Aeros, gets under way Sunday.

Hull, Bobby Guindon and Anders Hedberg each scored two goals for the Jets who outshot the Bulls 48-12.

Birmingham's rough play cost the club 13 minor penalties and one major. Dave Hanson of the Bulls took a minor and major in the first period when he tangled with Hull, knocking the left winger's hairpiece off. Hull was not penalized and retired briefly to the dressing room, returning with a helmet on.

Capt. Cook Scheme Hit

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — A Captain Cook fundraiser who plans to come looking for money in Vancouver has been criticized here for his "curious" methods.

Martin Frost, director of the Captain Cook Trust, claimed there is nothing unusual about his fund-raising.

But Private Eye magazine and an official at a large brokerage firm that does a great deal of Canadian business both questioned Frost's tactics.

Frost is raising money for a museum and other things.

The museum, which is to be built at Capt. Cook's birthplace, near Middlesborough, would cost about $1.5 million of which half is to come from the Middlesborough council. Asked if he was raising the other half, Frost, in a telephone interview, replied: "I would prefer to get a lot more money. Perhaps some kind newspaper in Vancouver would donate half a million."

He said the money would also be for "scholarships and bursaries."

Frost is criticized in the latest issue of Private Eye, a sometimes humorous, sometimes crusading magazine on two grounds:

His campaign to raise "interest free loans."

His offer to pay "expenses" of third parties who raise money for the campaign.

An official at the brokerage house said he "would rather agree" with the criticism in Private Eye, which termed Frost's methods "unusual" and "a curious way to go about raising money for charity."

Frost said he had seen the Private Eye article and did not deny its description of his methods of fund raising. He indicated that he thought the article was a joke.

Frost said he plans to be in Vancouver next Friday "on a fund raising expedition" that will last two weeks.

He said he will attempt to sell 1,000 "limited edition pictures and books on the early life of Cpt. Cook."

The trust fund has sent out publicity material which includes a list of "patrons" among whom is Paul Martin, Canadian High Commissioner in London. Others include British Prime Minister James Callaghan, Lord Louis Mountbatten and former prime minister Sir Harold Wilson.

A spokesman for Martin said the Canadian government was not contributing to the trust fund.

Frost has sent a letter to London stockbrokers soliciting donors of the interest free loans which would be for large amounts, such as $21,500 to $215,000 for a minimum of three months. The trust would invest the money and keep the interests.

Private Eye calls this "far from usual," a judgment confirmed by the official at the brokerage house, who said "I suppose it's a gimmick but it's rather odd."

It would take enormous sums of money to raise enough interest to cover even half the cost of the proposed museum — $630,000. The broker also questioned what sort of guarantee went with the loan. The more usual method, he said, is to arrange a convenant under which a charity is able to collect money that would otherwise be paid as income tax.

"Besides I would have thought that they could just have gone out and solicited enough donations openly," he said.

He also said it was "slightly odd" for Frost to approach stockbrokers with his scheme.

Frost claimed the interest-free loan method had been used by charities "for more than 50 years."

"The money goes into a clearing bank or some other form of safe investment and we merely keep the interest," he said. "There is no risk on the part of the lender."

His letter to brokers said: "Possibly you may have a client who may be interested in supporting our trust. Naturally it would be out of the question for us to pay an introduction fee, but we are prepared to meet the expenses you may incur in protecting your client's interests. We appreciate this may involve a personal call taking up your very valuable time and once costs were mutually agreed these would be reimbursed by the trust."

Said Private Eye: "Frost explained that these expenses were those that might be incurred in travelling to Middlesborough to check on the bona fides of the trust. Presumably it did not mean that although any broker or investment adviser could not claim an introduction fee as such he could claim a similar amount dressed up as the cost of his time and-or a trip real or imagined to Geneva, Cannes or similar funk holes of the rich."

LONDON (CP) — Time is running out for the officials and countries attempting to draw up a code of laws governing safeguards and use of the world's oceans.

After 20 years of trying, the United Nations law of the sea conference—meeting this time in Geneva—may have little more than 20 days left to settle its remaining thorny problems.

"If we don't make major progress at this session, we'll run out of time and major developed countries may pass unilateral legislation authorizing deep-sea mining," says J. Alan Beesley, deputy head of Canada's delegation.

The final session, which began in late March, is scheduled to end shortly after the middle of May.

The many-sided question of how to exploit the rich nodules of ore lying like baseballs scattered across the sea bed is only one of the big issues remaining.

Developing countries wanted the UN to set up an agency to do all the mining and marketing in international waters.

Some developed states wanted the mining and marketing put into the hands of individual countries and industry under a UN licencing arrangement.

Beesley, in a telephone interview from Geneva, said there have been signs of acceptance by "extremists on both sides" for the "middle way" put forward by Canada at the previous session.

Under the Canadian plan, each designated zone would be shared by a UN international body, sovereign states and free enterprise.

"About 90 per cent of the problems attacked by the conference have been resolved," Beesley said. "The remaining 10 per cent are difficult ones."

The best that can be expected from the current session, he feels, is a general agreement on a draft treaty which could lead to a full international treaty.

"The worst would be an inconclusive result or open disagreement."

Open disagreement—such as a split on the seabed mining issue—could divide the conference along north-south lines, with developed countries lined up against developing countries.

The current session in Geneva was marked by a slow start, with a 10-day wrangle over the presidency and "I'm concerned that we haven't made the best use of our time," Beesley said.

The conference is the third in a series that has already produced conventions which, for many states, have become part of international law.

The first conference met in Geneva in 1958 and drew up four international conventions which are still in force.

The second, in 1960, tackled disagreements over the state of territorial seas and fishery limits, and failed to produce any substantive accord.

Steps leading to the convening of the current third conference—of which this is the seventh session—began in 1967.

SOIL CONDITIONER SAFE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tests by the Greater Vancouver Regional District show the heavy metal content of a soil conditioner produced from sludge extracted at a nearby sewage treatment plant is not excessive.

Fred Claggett, acting manager of technical services for the Environment Protection Service, had said that heavy metals contained in Grow-Rich could be prevalent enough to create a health hazard.

Brian Talbot, GVRD senior assistant engineer, said that while heavy metal content could be dangerous if the product was applied in a concentrated way and built up in the soil, the use of Grow-Rich is not a problem.

Christ, economics subject of international study

A group of interested people from various countries is studying the challenge of reconciling exisiting economic systems with the teachings of Christ.

The Canadian Churchman says the 17 founder-members of the School of New Economics who met at the 1975 Habitat conference in Vancouver have plotted a course of action which includes research in economics, anthropology and global perspectives as well as work with community groups and public communication of their findings.

Most of the group's activities are carried on by correspondence. "We have no funds yet, but we can share books and exchange our criticisms of them," explains founder-member Marion Loring, a teacher from Alberta.

The basic question facing the School of New Economics is whether the precepts of capitalism can be reconciled with those of Christianity. To come to grips with this problem the group first examined some anthropological views of human nature.

"Is man just a super-acquisitive animal with unlimited wants?" asks Ms. Loring. "Or are there societies where people are content if they can get the basic necessities and a few little luxuries?"

Following its examination of human nature, the School of New Economics will begin research on basic economic questions. Working with community groups and local consumer organizations, members will study questions including land use and ownership and the relative merits of large and small-scale production methods.

Ms. Loring feels a program of this scope can be carried out successfully without university supervision or guidance. "Reading is the most effective way of studying...one is learning from the best thinkers of all times and places," she observes.

The School of New Economics does not plan to hold its findings back from the public until they have assumed a final form. The group plans to keep people abreast of their work and conclusions by communicating on a regular basis with academics, businessmen, the media and community organizations across the country.

"The urgency of the world situation does not allow us to just study quietly for years and then tell people," says Ms. Loring.

Ecumenical leader here April 27

The planning committee for Canadian Ecumenical Action is providing an opportunity to meet the group's co-ordinator, Rev. Val J. Anderson, on Thursday, April 27 at 7:30 p.m. at Metropolitan United Church, 1411 Quadra.

All interested persons are invited and particularly congregational and parish contact persons. The May issue of the Ecumenical News will be available.

Ecumenical Action began as P.O.E.M. (People's Opportunities in Ecumenical Mission) in the summer of 1973. At that time, a group of people experienced in community mission joined together to support new ventures of living out one's faith in the community.

The office opened Aug. 1, 1973 with a secretary and co-ordinator each half time. On Jan. 1, 1976, the office was moved to present larger space at 1811 West 16th St., Vancouver, and the time of the co-ordinator was extended.

An important development was the B.C. Ecumenical News, begun in the spring of 1976. By May, 1977, it had grown to 19,000 copies and is still growing. It shares ecumenical happenings in B.C. across Canada and around the world.

This, combined with increased numbers of volunteers and program participants, necessitates the development of an ecumenical funding base combining the gifts of individuals and groups. The thrust for this growth has stemmed from the spiritual affirmation which is at its core.

The minister of Trinity Presbyterian Church, Rev. G.D. Smith, begins a series of addresses this Sunday morning that seeks to face up to the difficulties facing historical Christianity.

Smith says there is a new scepticism abroad in the world today which is inevitable in an age of revolution when every sphere of thought and action has undergone such rapid change. Under the storm of political and technological upheaval many of the old landmarks have been swept away and people have felt compelled to re-examine their own traditionally held values, especially those spiritual values which have their rootage in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Smith says the idea for his series comes from his belief that the cardinal task of the church in the fulfilment of its evangelistic mission is the task of apologetics with gentleness and reverence making a strong defence of the fundamental Christian truths.

The development and peace group will meet in the Pope John Annex of Sacred Heart Church (4040 Nelthorpe) on Thursday, April 20, at 7:30 p.m.

The resolution The arms race endangers international peace and security, and diverts resources urgently needed for economic and social development, to be debated at a special disarmament session of the United Nations General Assembly in May and June, will be considered with Edith Adamson and Ben and Muriel Gough-Azmier of the Society of Friends (Quakers) showing slides and leading the discussion.

It is an open meeting and all faiths are welcome.

The Catholic Women's League of Queen of Peace Church in Esquimalt held election and installation of officers on April 5. Elected were Betty Kallrath, president; Barbara Dunahee, first vice-president; Mary Wakelin, second vice-president; Isabel Aucoin, secretary; and Betsy Bendall, treasurer.

A free Christian Science lecture Mind and Man will be given by Joseph G. Heard, C.S.B., of Miami, Florida, in Oak Bay Junior Secondary School auditorium, 2101 Cadboro Bay, on Sunday, May 7 at 3 p.m. All are welcome.

Heard, a member of the Christian Science board of lectureship, is sponsored for this talk by First Church of Christ, Scientist; 1205 Pandora, Victoria. He will explore the question of whether there is a supreme governing intelligence.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Worship can be defined as the formal expression in community of the allegiance and the gratitude which persons of faith owe and give to God. That is fundamental. But what relevance can worship have for you and me as we struggle through life?

It is a soundly biblical principle that our public worship must pass the test of relevance. Jesus said, "You will know them by their fruits" — and that saying must be used by Christians as they assess and judge their exercises in worship. The reality of worship, the sincerity of worship, the creativity of worship — these are shown only in the changes which are effected in the lives of those who worship.

It is wrong to see worship simply as a kind of psychological calisthenics, to think of a church service as a sort of spiritual slim-and-trim class. But it is even more wrong to think that the allegiance and gratitude expressed in worship are not necessarily expected to bear fruit in the everyday lives of worshippers.

One of the marks of mature personhood is acceptance of the hard fact that many of the hard facts of one's life cannot be changed. But it is also a mark of maturity to recognize that one's way of looking at the hard facts can be changed. And worship, authentic worship, can help us change our perspectives on ourselves and on our circumstances.

It is often simply a matter of perspective that makes the difference between happiness and unhappiness, between satisfaction in life and persisting frustration, between inner serenity and inner turmoil. Worship can widen our perspectives, helping us to escape from much of the self-centredness which frustrates the real good of the self, enabling us to see our problems and our relations with others in new and liberating ways.

But worship, authentic worship, is much more than merely perfunctory attendance at church services, much more than simply going through a few of standard motions of piety once a week.

We who have the task of leadership in worship often let our people down. They come hungry for bread, and we sometimes give them stones or, what is even worse, dainty little sugar cookies.

But you churchgoers shouldn't be unfairly critical about what you get, or don't get, from services of worship. You do not worship if you merely sit inertly in your pew and watch the clergy and choir put on a show. Worship is not in easy acquiescence.

Worship entails activity of mind and heart. You must come to worship in a mood of expectancy, the expectancy that can make you receptive to the grace of God, the energy of God's spirit impinging on the minds and hearts of persons. And it is the grace of God that makes the difference, giving you new perspectives on yourselves and on your circumstances and relationships.

Rights seminar finds hopeful signs

Weighty issues tackled

Some 100 delegates from across Canada — women, men, laity, clergy — attended a seminar on human rights in Canada and the world held at Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa, March 28-30, sponsored by the Canadian Council of Churches (CCC) and the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops (CCCB). The seminar tackled some weighty issues in the human rights field.

DR. ROY NEEHALL, general secretary of the Caribbean conference of churches, spoke at the opening session March 28 on the seminar theme Human Rights: A Problem for Canadians? He said that Canadians need to be more conscious of the problems of human rights in Canada and their share of responsibility for human rights internationally. "The unity of humankind permits us to have solidarity with all human beings."

DESPITE THE BLEAK human rights picture in the world, Neehall pointed to some hopeful signs: Amnesty International's Nobel Peace Prize award, freeing of political prisoners in some countries, and the UN mandatory arms embargo against South Africa.

GORDON FAIRWEATHER, chief commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, addressed the seminar Wednesday evening. He observed that the Canadian Human Rights Act, given royal assent July 14, 1977, consolidates existing human rights and extends the legislative authority of Parliament into two fundamental areas of human rights — discrimination and the privacy of the individual — and with the Canadian Human Rights Commission will help to confirm Canada's international stature as a country of high principles.

THE SEMINAR DIVIDED into five work groups to discuss different aspects of human rights. The work-group on civil and political rights brought recommendations to the plenary session of the seminar. The seminar went on record to "strongly request" the Canadian government not grant any further power to the police forces until public debate has been held on the issue. The sposoring bodies (CCC and CCCB) were urged to strengthen research and dissemination of information so that its constituencies may be more aware of the trend toward a "national security state mentality" in Canada.

THE REFUGEE immigration work group expressed concern that the Canadian government "has failed to distinguish between immigrants and refugees in its selective procedures for entry into Canada, and continues to subject refugees to immigrant criteria." The seminar stated refugees are beings in special need and should have less restrictive, speedier entry into Canada.

The rights of women work group was concerned that churches take seriously womens' growing self-determination, advising churches to "bring God's liberation to women in all walks of life."

THE RIGHT OF self-determination work group challenged the assumptions and decisions of those in political and economic power, and urged development of a society with greater social, political and economic justice among the Dene, the Quebecois and the powerless, whether economically or politically poor.

The rights of workers work group urged the churches to critically examine themselves, so that, with Jesus Christ, they too might have "unconditional solidarity with the oppressed."

THE CHURCHES were urged to learn more about the aspirations of the workers and support their struggles about rights of association, autonomy of unions, arbitrary closing of factories, lockouts, collusion between employers and police and to support local full employment committees, as well as joining in solidarity with workers at the international level.

Never alone again

—AP

Rev. Donald W. McEvoy, program director of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, displays emblem that Christians across U.S. will wear next week as "badge of honor." Yellow star of David once worn by Jews marking them for degradation and extermination during Hitler's Germany is to be worn as "symbolic declaration that Jews will never again stand alone or be victimized by any Nazi-type philosophy." Observances begin Sunday, timely with an NBC TV special Holocaust docu-drama about plight of Jews before and during Second World War.

A Farewell to Gati

audrey johnson

This weekend we will be saying farewell to one of the most colorful personalities ever to have made an impact on the small musical world of Victoria. It is a full decade since Laszlo Gati arrived here to take over the artistic directorship of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, and it was a much smaller, more restricted world then than he is leaving with the conclusion of this, the VSO's 37th season.

In many ways it is still a small world, particularly with regard to audience comprehension and performer opportunity. But for some of the growth visible in that decade Gati will be given credit, even by those among his audiences and associates whom he has failed to charm.

A man gifted with ideas and the ability to carry them out, some of his innovations have directly benefited both the orchestra and the community. I'm thinking particularly of the summer festival of sunset outdoor concerts which proved such an effective means of introducing large segments of the public for the first time to the Victoria Symphony.

He will be the first to admit that he is not solely responsible for the orchestra's growth toward professionalism. Parallel development of the University of Victoria music department and the Conservatory of Music have provided a major impetus which he, however, was quick to estimate and utilize. He improved conditions for all concerned when he brought about the extension of the season from 10 pairs of concerts to 12, developed the out-of-town concert schedule and school concerts. For the first five seasons he chose themes and designed brochures, some of the latter a lot more attractive than most of those of more recent times.

Not all his innovations worked, but he did not fully understand for some time the general superficiality of Victoria's musical audiences, which tend to feel that when they have heard an artist perform a concerto that's all there is to be discovered. His excellent concept of an international recital series presenting a few of the symphony soloists in fine programs at the McPherson Playhouse, was almost totally unappreciated and had to be abandoned, a failure that must have been one of his greatest disappointments and is still much regretted by some of us dedicated listeners.

One of his greatest gifts to audiences was his lifting of the veil of mystique — a certain formalism, a kind of musical condescension — that had existed between orchestra and audience under the former conductor who, despite superb musical and technical ability, had a cold, aloof and unbending platform manner.

With Gati there is no condescension; he finds no sacrilege in a beaming smile, a joke, a short monologue in the middle of a concert program, an instruction to the audience as to their reaction. Purists may shudder but many people love it and who can say that music is not more widely and fully enjoyed when the atmosphere is friendly and relaxed and the "serious" aspect is softened?

Who among those present on one occasion, were not delighted with Gati's aplomb when he stopped a performance a few measures after the start of a concerto that was being loudly punctuated by the Royal Theatre's antiquated steam pipes? He stepped down into the orchestra pit, turned off the steam, and returning, nonchalently tossed the valve knob into the wings.

Laszlo Gati will tell you that he regards music as a very natural force and that the worst thing a listener can do is strain to react in what is believed to be the "proper" way. In his view the only proper way to listen to music is to relax, let the music fill your ears and mind, and whatever your particular reaction may be — peace, happiness, excitement, tears or anger — its yours and you've a right to it.

He has never accepted the phrase, to "understand" or "not understand" various kinds of music. As I interpret his viewpoint, music is simply an arrangement of sounds of different qualities and textures uttered in certain forms and progressions, rhythms and combinations that one either likes a lot, a little or not at all. So what is there to understand?

GATI
. . . end of a decade

Maestro Gati has certainly, behind the scenes — and not always so much behind, at that — had differences, often strong ones, with symphony boards and managers. And of course, as we are well aware, all the error cannot consistently be on one side. He has battled and won some fights by being both more inflexible and more devious than his opponents and also more charming where it did the most good for his cause.

But he is also a campaigner who knows when to stop being inflexible and when to retreat to a neutral position.

Well, all that is water under the bridge now and as Laszlo Gati departs from the Victoria podium to travel and guest-conduct for the next few months, all of us who knew him, experienced his warmest aspects and undoubted charisma, and admired his initiative and the genuine musicalness of much of his work with the symphony, will as genuinely wish him well in all his future undertakings.

Beethoven's 9th His Finale

One of the greatest and most comprehensive works ever written for ensemble performance will mark Laszlo Gati's final appearance at the conclusion of his 11th season with the Victoria Symphony.

Beethoven's Choral Ninth, in which the composer strove to express a boundless joy, will be performed Sunday and Monday at the Royal Theatre with the Salt Lake Symphonic Choir providing the mighty chorus and the four soloists who participate in the work's final movement.

The largest independent travelling choir in America, under conductor-tenor soloist George Welch, the Salt Lake Symphonic Choir was organized in 1949 and has since been heard in concert throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. The mixed voice ensemble represents all walks of life in ages from 17 to 55. Carefully selected, the voices offer a unique tonal balance and blend.

In addition to the Choral Ninth, Gati will lead the orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C Major, a work in which the Haydn-Mozart influence is still discernible.

Top Artists Coming For Summer School

For the fifth successive summer Victoria will be the setting for the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts, a prestigious six-week program of master classes and individual tuition for serious musicians and young professionals, conducted by some of the world's top-rated artists and groups.

The Shawnigan Summer School, based on the St.Michael's University School campus, is esteemed by experts on the national scene as unrivalled in all Canada for its standard of teaching and performance in instrumental solo, ensemble and vocal work. The 1978 program, which will run from July 12 to Aug. 23, will not only reassemble most of the faculty and disciplines of the previous four years here, according to founder-director J.J. Johannesen, but is offering in addition an opera course, tuition in clarinet, and a new chamber music program specially designed for amateurs.

The renowned Philadelphia String Quartet will be conducting the latter, and master sessions in clarinet will be given by Gervase de Peyer, one of the world's top-rated clarinetists.

The chamber opera program will be under the direction of Pierette Alarie, an outstanding Canadian opera singer and director, with voice coaches Leopold Simoneau of Canada and Rose Bampton of the United States. They will be assisted by pianist-voice coach, Denise Massee. This program will culminate in two performances at the McPherson Playhouse and a subsequent tour throughout B.C. sponsored by the Vancouver-based Festival Concert Society.

Also new this year is a collaboration between the Shawnigan Summer School and the University of Victoria. This collaboration will be expressed through a beginning course in electronic music under UVic's Dr. John Celona, which will cover not only basics of making good recordings, dubbing and splicing, but will include the use of electronic music synthesizers in composition. The Pacific Wind Quintet, the University of Victoria String Trio and composer Martin Bartlett will also be involved in performance and studies of "Canadian Music Today."

As it has done from the beginning, (as a 1971 centennial project at Shawnigan Lake Boys School), the faculty draws artists from England, Germany, Spain, Czechoslovakia and across North America. Returning this year will be violinist Ruggiero Ricci; double bassist Gary Karr; the Juilliard School's famed cello maestro, Harvey Shapiro (Rostropovich sent his daughter to be taught by Shapiro at the Shawnigan School a couple of years ago); flutist Robert Aitken; brilliant U.S. pianist Abbey Simon; harpsichordist Harmon Lewis; violinists Yuri and Dana Mazurkevich, now of Canada; German violist Eberhard Klemmstein; and American pianist Robin McCabe, who was recently the subject of an in-depth profile in the New Yorker.

Highlighting the Canadian contingent of artists will be pianist William Aide, mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing from Vancouver, Victoria violinist Sydney Humphreys, and violist Leslie Malowany of Vancouver. From Czechoslovakia will come the famous Brno String Quartet to add more lustre to the chamber music program.

The only non-musical art included in the Shawnigan Summer School program will be pottery and ceramic sculpture, with daily classes led by noted Canadian ceramist and potter Robert Weghsteen.

A further collaboration concerns the Victoria Conservatory of Music, which is listed in the brochure as offering a junior/senior piano program including Suzuki piano, a string program with Suzuki violin and a woodwind program for ages four years and up.

Theatre Guild Comedy

Frothy, witty, and just a little risque, a play that is altogether amusing and just somewhat thought-provoking, is the way reviewers have described Benn Levy's comedy, The Rape of the Belt, which will be opening at Langham Court Theatre Thursday. The Victoria Theatre Guild production will run through April 29.

Based on a legend of Hercules, the story concerns the bastard son of the god Zeus, Heracles, and the ninth of his 12 labors. Heracles is required to capture a jewelled belt — the symbol of her royalty — from Antiope, Queen of the Amazons, a legendary warlike race of women. Heracles is aided in the venture by his friend, the valiant but absent-minded Theseus. Used to making their conquests in terms of open combat, the pair find themselves disarmed and floundering under the assault of charm and beauty represented by the two Amazon sisters, Antiope and Hippolyte.

Playwright Levy's concept of having the Greek gods Zeus and Hera introduce the play and spice it with comments throughout, like a pair of witty bookends, adds flavor and style and enhances the amusement of the piece.

Director Joan Hopper has involved an excellent cast. Sheila Litt plays Antiope, and Hetty Clews, Hippolyte. Jim Netherton will be seen as Heracles and David Bird as Theseus, while Richard Litt and Barbara Meiklejohn play the gods, Zeus and Hera. Support roles are in the hands of Nora Kellie, Antoinette Church, Sarah Price and Jackie Gins.

A British Farce Set for Summer

A summer season of quality entertainment at McPherson Playhouse is beginning to take shape with concerts, musical shows and plays lining up. Among definite bookings that will offer fun for Victorians and their visitors in August is a Victoria Actors Association presentation of another of the popular British comedies that have been among this group's outstanding successes in past seasons.

The choice has fallen on a play by Richard Harris and Leslie Darbon entitled Two and Two Make Sex. There will be 12 performances of this farce starting Aug. 18. Director Allan Purdy has brought together all the original players from the Association's greatest comedy success, Move Over Mrs. Markham.

The story concerns the male virility crisis of George Williams, an almost middle-aged husband, and his absurdly funny attempts to maintain that feeling of youth.

Colin Skinner will be appearing as George, with Janet Senior as his wife and Carolyn Stephenson as the exotic friend. Mary Bissenden, John Britt and Jack Droy complete the ensemble. Set design will be by Carole Sabiston, one of Canada's most unique and admired artists, who will be working for the first time with the Actors Association. Biddy Gaddes will be costuming her fifth play for the group.

Mozart Requiem

In Christ Church Cathedral on Friday, Vancouver tenor Bruce Pullan will be a guest of Amity Singers when the choir presents one of the major performances of the current season as Jon Washburn conducts the chamber ensemble, guest artists and orchestra, in the beautiful and moving Mozart Requiem.

Also on the program will be Vaughan Williams' Five Mystical Songs, and Vivaldi's Beatus Vir.

Pullan sang the Evangelist in Amity's production of the St. John Passion. Soprano soloist is Victoria's Jane MacKenzie, who won the National Festival voice competition in Toronto last fall. Contralto Marjorie Biggar and baritone Edgar Samuel are the other soloists.

Bach's Musical Offering, and solo and trio sonatas by Handel, Telemann, and Michel de la Barre. There is no admission charge for the concert.

Thad Jones and Mel Lewis . . . at Royal Thursday

The Big Band Style

In a music world that had no room for "big bands", on a hot July night in Detroit in 1955, the idea for the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra was born out of a meeting and communication between Lewis, a drummer with Stan Kenton, and Jones, who had starred on cornet and fleugelhorn for nine years with Count Basie.

The collaboration developed into a success story as the orchestra that evolved created its own distinctive sound, which is described as the music of today, tomorrow and yesterday, all grouped into one tidy package, big band style.

The Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra, with its membership consisting of New York's finest musicians, will be playing in Victoria, at the Royal Theatre, on Thursday at 8 p.m. Reputed to be one of the world's outstanding of its kind, the 16-piece band makes its Victoria stop as part of a first tour of the Pacific Northwest.

Tickets are on sale at Memorial Arena and the Hillside Mall ticket centre. The performance is a presentation of Prestige Entertainment Agencies.

New Trio at Belfry

A new ensemble on the Victoria music scene is Island, a trio of widely known muscians performing on a versatile range of instruments and in diversified styles. Island is to be heard in concert at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, Saturday at 8 p.m.

With Paul Gellman, piano, fiddle, guitar and vocals; David Woodhead, bass, guitar and vocals; and Jerome Jarvis, percussion, guitar and vocals, the range veers from jazz to folk and boogie to fiddle tunes.

Coming originally from Ontario where they performed with the late folk group, Perth County Conspiracy, the three have worked extensively with many popular artists in concerts and recording sessions, performing both together and separately. This is to be the group's first major concert in Victoria, although Gellman is known to many Victorians for his music making this past winter in several city lounges.

Smile Show Auditions

Smile Show originator Jerry Gosley is looking for some new talent for his popular British-type music hall revue. It's the 26th year for the traditional Victoria show and will be its first in the Empress Hotel, an event that some people are regarding as a perfect marriage of two old capital city institutions.

Some Smile Show performershave become nationally known entertainers and the opportunity is now being offered to theatre students or established versatile performers — dancers, singers, musicians, comedians and novelty acts are being sought — who would like to spend the nine-week run from July to September with the Smile Show.

Auditions will be held Friday and anyone interested should contact Gosley at 598-1819 or write to him at 522 Beach Drive.

At the Galleries

Videolab, one aspect of Open Space Gallery, will present a video production workshop next Saturday in the Video Access Studio, 510 Fort, from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Participants will learn to use portable video equipment and will work as a group on a short video production. The workshop will be led by Peggy Cady, director of the program.

Participants will be introduced to basic production skills and those seriously interested will be enabled to continue working in the medium through Open Space productions. Pre-registration is required and may be made in person at Open Space. The fee is $10 for adults and $6 for Open Space members.

Sculptures in clay entitled Coastal Echoes, the work of Simon Henson and Bob Brinton, will be shown at The Potters Wheel Gallery during the next two weeks. The exhibition opened today and will continue through May 3. Newcomer Brinton is inspired at present by certain aspects of his natural environment, particularly inter-tidal sandstone and other weathered rock textures. Henson's works express the vitality in aspects of ancient rock formations.

CATTRALL

Island Actress Stars on TV

An honorary captaincy in the Los Angeles Salvation Army followed Kim Cattrall's performance as a Salvation Army lass in an episode of the TV series, Switch, last winter. It was one of many indications of her success in a rapidly developing career for the Vancouver Island girl who began theatre activity and voice training while still in school at Comox.

Tonight she will be seen in a lead role in a two-hour segment of NBC's Colombo, playing opposite Peter Falk. The show begins at 9:30.

Kim, who was a speech entrant in the Victoria Music Festival a few years ago and won many first places, has had roles in The Class of 65, Logan's Run, The Hardy Boys, and Quincy in recent months. Her fan mail is beginning to mount at Universal Studios and she has been honored with the placing of her photograph on a feature wall with all the previous stars of Universal.

She has just completed work in a new mini-series based on the novel, The Bastard, which is about the birth of the American nation. It is to be aired sometime next month. In the cast with Kim are Bill Shatner (playing Paul Revere), Barry Sullivan, Buddy Ebsen, Olivia Hussey and Andrew Stevens.

Kim first fell in love with acting exactly 10 years ago when she played the part of Mighty Germ in a school play called Piffle It's Only a Sniffle.

Revellers Gather 25 Years Later

After a lapse of 25 years, The Revellers will hold a reunion banquet on Monday, April 24, in the Duke of Kent Room at the Empress Hotel.

What is The Revellers?

It's a group of business and professional men that long ago got together in this city to work on service projects and to enjoy social and fun times.

How did this happen?

Late one evening, back in 1928, eight young men met in Terry's ice cream parlor (then an active part of that family's drugstore at the southwest corner of Fort and Douglas Streets, and a popular rendezvous for youths.)

It was a planned meeting, with the definite idea of forming a service and social club.

Over their milkshakes and sundaes, these young men became so engrossed, midnight closing bell sounded while they were still deep in discussion.

One of the eight worked in a local bank. So the meeting moved on to that bank and was concluded in the manager's office.

There it was definitely decided to form a young men's club and a date for a second meeting was set when that club would be officially organized.

The eight young men, all of whom became charter members, were Charles Armstrong, George U. Clarke, Ron M. Grant, Kenneth R. Genn, Edward L. McConnan, Charles H. Sherwood, W. H. Sturrock and Charles H. Ruttan.

Genn was named first president; Armstrong, Clarke and Sherwood, secretary, treasurer and sergeant-at-arms, respectively.

First social event, a hike, was arranged for the following Sunday and it was decided a first venture into service work would be a float in the May 24 parade, a month ahead.

That inaugural meeting was held exactly 50 years ago, in the home of Charles Ruttan, on April 24, 1928.

Subsequently club colors (blue, orange and silver) and a club pin (an owl on a shield) were approved and Archdeacon A. E. deL Nunns of St. Mary's Anglican Church was named chaplain and first honorary member of the club.

In the next 25 years The Revellers attracted an ever increasing number of forward thinking young men.

Many service projects were undertaken and many social get-togethers were enjoyed.

When I sat in Ken Genn's office the other day and listened as he reminisced with Ron Kay, last president of the club and Hugh Molyneaux, long-time member and chairman of the present reunion banquet, I learned there were hikes, picnics, card parties, treasure hunts, sports tournaments and fishing trips. (These last in a power launch owned by two of the members and named the Miss Reveller.)

A number was allotted when a member joined the club and that number "was his and his alone", Genn said.

Names were proposed, presented and voted on before a man was approached," Kay explained.

"They had to be approved one hundred per cent. One blackball and we would not follow through."

As members left Victoria for Edmonton and Vancouver branches were formed in those cities and the three groups maintained a close liaison for years.

All three men laughed heartily as they remembered a treasure hunt in which the club hired an airplane, put a winning ticket for the challenge cup in a tin can, tied it to a small parachute and had that parachute dropped near Goldstream.

"We were all out there waiting," Molyneaux recalled. "We followed the clues carefully but we couldn't find that tin can."

Eventually a total stranger found it, far from where it was supposed to be, and turned it in.

In September, 1929, the first issue of what became a monthly newsletter, The Revellers Review, was issued and sold to members at 10 cents a copy. Charles Sherwood was the first editor-in-chief, and H. Douglas Genn the artist.

As the club grew, nine trophy cups were obtained for competition among the members in as many different sports, including tennis and golf.

A team was entered in the city softball league and there was competition in some sports, with other service clubs in the city.

Here came another reminiscent chuckle as Genn spoke of The Revellers entering a service club relay hockey race in the old arena in Oak Bay.

"We won that race," he said, "and the same night the arena burned down."

Whenever a profit was made on a dance or social project, 25 per cent was placed in a donation account and used "for suitable charities and at times the members decreed."

A project, shared as a member of the local service club council, was sponsorshiping on two occasions in the 1930s of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra headed by Karl Kruger.

"Both times it was a rare treat," Genn said with no little pride in his voice, "and we made money."

Reminiscences also include the many dances held by The Revellers in the Uplands Golf Club, the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, the old Amphion Hall, the Sirocco, and at the top of the Campbell Building, so recently demolished.

One New Year Eve dance at Royal Colwood Golf Club there was trouble finding a suitable orchestra.

As a last resource a phone call went through to Vic Meyers, then Lieutenant-Governor of Washington State and a popular band leader.

He sent up a dance band, Genn remembered, "but to get them here we had to put up money at customs for safe return of their instruments."

There is no doubt many more such memories will surface at the 50th reunion banquet on April 24.

"Already we have acceptances from 40 to 45 Revellers," Molyneaux says, "among them five charter members — Grant, Genn, McConnan and Ruttan of Victoria and Sherwood who now lives in Seattle."

Why was the group named The Revellers?

"We don't actually know," Genn said.

"It just happened", is the way Molyneaux put it.

Kay added that "it caused concern back down the years that the name was not quite serious enough for us.

"In fact, we ran a contest to find a better name but when the suggestions came in (among them Levellers and Benevollers) we couldn't agree on any one.

"So The Revellers it was and The Revellers it has remained."

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Even tea drinkers who like it strong can make a gallon of "Indian tea" with only four to six tea bags or one to two tablespoons of loose tea. Fill a gallon glass jug with tap water, add tea. Place the jug in the sunshine, outdoors or in front of a sunny window, for several hours until the tea is as dark as you like. Store in the refrigerator. No, the tea won't become cloudy.

When was the last time your vacuum cleaner got new brushes? If the old ones aren't sweeping clean, relace them. And if you can take them out, you can put new ones in. Replacing them yourself saves a minimum labor charge at the repair shop, which also sells brushes. Take the old ones with you, of course, so you'll pick out the proper new ones.

The temptation to snatch up a bargain on last season's suede jackets should be only a temptation until you examine the nap. Is it all the same texture? If there are longer, rougher areas, the skin is thinner and will show up even more after wear and dry cleaning. If you can't see much difference, rub your hand over the suede to feel any change in the nap's texture.

A used furniture store may not be the best shopping place for a home desk. Office furniture stores often take trade-ins then sell the sturdy old oak and walnut desks. Or watch for an advertised auction at an office building. The old desks can be oiled or stripped down to fine woods at low prices. Think of all the storage space for sewing supplies such as desk would offer.

Kids Harmed By Hospitals

HAMILTON (CP) — A pediatrician at McMaster University says later adverse effects on children of being in hospital have been documented for more than 20 years but little attention is being paid to preventing them.

"There are lots of things we can do that we aren't," Dr. Kenneth C. Finkel told representatives of 25 southern Ontario hospitals Wednesday.

He said a number of steps can be taken to minimize the emotional traumas some children suffer from being in hospital.

Doctors should be sure it is absolutely necessary they be admitted and that treatment cannot be handled on an outpatient basis. If children must be admitted, their stay should be as short as possible, he said.

Dr. Finkel said one child in four in Hamilton will have some contact with a hospital in any one year — through out-patient tests such as x-rays or treatment in an emergency department or specialized clinic — and one child in 12 will be admitted.

He said children's fear of the unknown should be alleviated by visits to hospitals for kindergarten classes or, when possible, by pre-admission visits for young patients.

He also suggested hospitals re-examine attitudes on visiting and adopt liberal policies for parents, brothers and sisters, friends and even pets.

"We're always scared about infections, but people live with pets in the home and don't fall over dead every week."

Referring to a Vancouver hospital where parents provide bathing, feeding and general care, with doctors and nurses visiting as they would in a home visit, Dr. Finkel said overnight accommodation for parents should be available if a parent wants to stay.

With DOROTHY FRASER

A unique health "supermarket"! . . .

We've just visited the largest health supply supermarket in Canada! . . . Yes, really! . . . And we say "supermarket" advisedly because, while you can buy a wide variety of things in ordinary health stores . . . you may have to visit several before you get everything you want . . . This one has everything under one roof . . . and so much variety that you can get a number of products . . . like natural toiletries, herbal remedies, vitamin supplements . . . under several different brand names! . . . We were simply fascinated with all we saw in this unique store, whose name is Vita-Love . . . and which is situated in the James Bay Mall! . . . There's more of everything than we've ever seen all at once before! . . . The variety of grains, flakes, nuts, beans, seeds, dried fruit and the like . . . sold in bulk . . . seems endless . . . and prices struck us as very reasonable . . . in fact, we're told they're the best in town . . . and this goes for the jams, jellies, preserves, etc. . . . There's an organically-grown fresh fruit section . . . a dairy section . . . Frozen foods and natural ice-cream . . . A large selection of spices . . . Quite a selection of cheeses . . . with one or other on special at all times . . . Super-delicious bread made to Vita-Love's own recipe . . . All of these things, mark you, pure and wholesome and without additives or preservatives of any kind . . . Do go in and look around . . . and sample a free cup of their tasty coffee substitute hot drink! . . . Vita-Love Health Products, James Bay Square, Simcoe & Menzies St., 382-6122.

The new separates we were shown at Charmante's this week are something to shout about! . . . There's a group in natural colored raw silk, consisting of a shirt with mandarin neck and shirt-tail bottom . . . pants with front pleat . . . skirt gathered at the front, with side pockets . . . Prices are very good for these . . . skirt and shirt $40 each, and the pants, $45 . . . The same natural raw silk has been used for dresses accented with the leather look in brown . . . One style has elasticized waist, long sleeves and round neck . . . with separate triangular scarf, and is tagged at $95 . . . Another, with cap sleeves and boat neckline, buttons on the shoulders . . . also has its own scarf . . . Then there's a classic suit, priced at just $105, and a suit with cap sleeves . . . But getting back to the separates . . . we love the machine-washable denim blue pinfeather striped cotton/polyester things! . . . A blazer, an A-line skirt with fly front and side pockets . . . pants with front pleats . . . and "boot" pants . . . which look like a wide culotte that just covers the tops of boots . . . There's a sleeveless pullover top, too, with white collar and placket front . . . These separates all look so crisp and cool . . . and they'd make mighty nice travellers! . . . Mind you, Charmante's have a lot of other separates as well . . . Too many to mention, in fact . . . And they still have a nice selection of graduation dresses, starting at about $70 . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Exquisite reproduction carriage clocks . . .

If you're really discriminating and in search of the beautiful and unusual . . . we do commend to you the lovely reproduction carriage clocks made by Chas. Frodsham of London, England, and exclusive to de Goutiere Jewellers here . . . These are gorgeous clocks . . . 8-day movements . . . made of polished brass with double glass panels, Roman numerals on the dials . . . Several sizes and shapes . . . and one clock even strikes the hours . . . They're reproductions of clocks the aristocracy used in their carriages around the mid-18's . . . Beautifully made and real conversation pieces! . . . We saw some new and very different watches at de Goutiere this week . . . Bearing the name "Lucia," they're Swiss movements in sterling silver cases made in Italy . . . Very contemporary in design, with their narrow rigid bracelets and smokey dials . . . These are very new, and look a lot more expensive than their $119 to $200 price tags! . . . (You might think of one of them for a graduating daughter!) . . . de Goutiere has a good selection of estate jewellery . . . Diamonds, emeralds, rubies, sapphires . . . all at very good prices . . . Should you have anything at all in the jewellery line in mind, do visit de Goutiere in the next couple of weeks because the store will be closed all of May while the de G's holiday in Europe . . . Re-opening June 6 . . . de Goutiere, Jeweller, Ltd., 2542 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Knits loom largely for now and later . . .

Eaton's Signature Shop is always, as far as we're concerned, a joy to visit . . . but sometimes it's more of a joy than others . . . and one of those times is right NOW! . . . We saw a couple of Italian knits . . . exclusive to Eaton's . . . which we thought would be heavenly to own . . . Perfect for summer . . . eminently wearable a good part of the rest of the year . . . and wonderful for stuffing into a corner of your bag when you're off on your travels! . . . Both have blouson tops . . . one in a sort of openwork lacy effect . . . the other with a dear little drawstring skirt . . . Peach, black and oyster are the colors in which you may have one of these little beauties! . . . As for you women who dote on Kimberly knits . . . Eaton's have some new ones to tempt you! . . . There's the classic two-piece style that could well be the backbone of your wardrobe . . . Washable, 100% polyester, with pleated skirt, collared jacket buttoning demurely up to the neck . . . Comes in either aqua or powder blue . . . Another Kimberly is a 3-piece outfit with pleated skirt, sleeveless top and cardigan . . . Powder blue or navy with white . . . We noticed a Kimberly bright yellow pant suit with blouson top . . . Very striking! . . . Also bearing the Kimberly label is a raw silk dress . . . a young, simple style which would look particularly well on a larger figure because it has no waistline . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, Loc. 242

Rose with turquoise trim . . . lilac with light green . . . yellow with green and bright green with bone patent . . . priced at $50 . . . "Burt" is a low-heeled shoe in fine suede with a slashed trim on the vamp . . . Navy with white heel and piping . . . red with red, and bone with a biege trim . . . Big savings on travel in Canada . . .

Planning to travel to Eastern Canada this summer or later on in the year? . . . There are now two ways you can fly to Toronto and Montreal . . . at really tremendous savings . . . That is, if you know well in advance when you want to leave . . . and can book at least 45 days ahead! . . . Paulin's explained it all to us this week . . . First of all, there's what's known as Air Charter Class . . . on both Air Canada and CP Air . . . Round trip, Victoria to Toronto, $235 instead of $408! . . . and to Montreal, $251 instead of $440! . . . This class fare is for a 7-to-30-day stay in the east, and there are other conditions attached which we haven't room to go into here, but Paulin's will give you complete information . . . The second money-saving plan is a Charter Flight on CP Air . . . flights starting in June through September . . . and Paulin's have all the departure dates . . . These charters are even cheaper . . . $189 to $229 . . . from Vancouver . . . for one, two or three-week stays . . . but there are special extended-stay flights which allow you to remain all summer . . . a real boon to teachers, students or other people who want to spend a summer in the East at a very reasonable price! . . . Like the Charter Class flights, these charters are also subject to certain conditions, and must be booked a minimum of 45 days in advance . . . but they're certainly worthwhile if you can manage to plan well ahead! . . . For full information see . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-8168.

Most Headaches Don't Mean Trouble Ahead

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The chief of neurology at Sunnybrook Medical Centre in Toronto says most headaches are not omens of impending catastrophe.

Dr. J.G. Edwards said Wednesday headaches often are tension-induced and about 10 to 20 per cent are of the migraine variety.

Some headaches involve nervousness while others may be caused by prolonged sitting in a certain posture or because of muscle contractions in the scalp, he said.

Dr. Edwards, in London to speak at a conference on brain disease at University Hospital, said moderately-elevated blood pressure usually does not cause headaches, but headaches can result in persons suffering severely high blood pressure.

He said most headaches are not warnings of underlying problems but some can warn of strokes and for this reason doctors should be cautious in assessing patients, especially if they are suffering headaches for the first time after the age of 40.

Dr. Edwards said women tend to have more migraine headaches because of hormonal changes such as those occurring during menstruation.

Craft Resurgence Boon to the Ozarks

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Not long ago I was in Arkansas, as a guest of an area development agent for the University of Arkansas Co-operative Extension Service.

In 1961 several people began taking a long, hard look at the economic status of several counties in the Ozark foothills. This area had once been the home of several unique crafts that were fast dying out with the older people. It was decided that a resurgence of these crafts could be an economic bonus to the region.

Ozark mountaineers had deep traditions in the making of dulcimers, wood carving, the weaving of white oak baskets and many other crafts. A group of dedicated people went to Gatlinburg, Tenn., to witness a show of the Southern Highland Handicraft Guild.

The Appalachian craftsmen imparted the fire of inspiration into their Ozark cousins, and the result was the forming of the Ozark Foothills Handicraft Guild. It now boasts almost 350 members with four retail outlets throughout north-central Arkansas.

The main shop is at Mountain View and is open all year round. The other three are open only during the summermonths. Since the Guild was formed it has sponsored 60 workshops for craftsmen to show others how a particular product is made.

Requirements for guild membership are that the craftsman be an Arkansas resident and that they pass a judging review. Each can be judges for two categories. For instance, basketry and wood carving, or quilts and wall hangings. It is up to the individual, but he is certified for only two.

This had been a truly self-help program for the area, for not only has it helped the people to help themselves financially, but it has given them back a pride in the traditions of their forefathers.

The Ozark Frontier Trail Festival and Craft Show is held every year on the second week-end in October, should you ever find yourself in the area at that particular time. It is well worth a visit.

This week's pattern is a crochet round coffee table mat which can be made in a rainbow of colors, just the kind of mat to bring out when entertaining guests on a rainy or dull days. It is most effective when crocheted in three colors to complement your decor you can also make it for a shower or wedding gift.

Lead Her Not Into Temptation

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing a woman for about four months. We're both married and in our 30s, and work for the same large company.

After we had been seeing each other every day after work for about three months at her house (while her husband was at work), she decided to break it off, saying she felt guilty and was afraid her husband would find out.

We'd stop for a few days, but we'd see each other at work and the desire to be together was so strong in both of us, one or the other would break down and ask, "How about a cup of coffee after work to talk?" Then we'd go to a public restaurant to talk, but we'd always end up back at her house.

I can't get this woman out of my mind, and she admits she's miserable, too. This off-again, on-again business is about to drive me crazy. I love her and don't want to lose her. We both have small children, so divorce is out . . . at least for now. What should we do? No names or locations please.

LOST MY HEART.

DEAR LOST: You are being selfish and unfair. Obviously, the woman is trying to keep her marriage intact, which is what you should be doing in view of the fact that you both have small children. Show some manliness and avoid situations that lead to temptation. I now it's not easy to suppress strong physical feelings, but in this case, it's the lesser of the evils.

DEAR ABBY: You quoted Edith Head, a famous fashion designer, as saying that all women look alike in the bathtub.

I'll wager that I've seen more women in the bathtub than you and Edith Head combined, and if there's one thing I'm sure of, it's that all women do not look alike in the bathtub.

SWINGER.

DEAR SWINGER: Technically you're right. (But they all have the same standard equipment.)

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a psychiatrist for several months. I think I know what is at the root of my trouble, but I am too ashamed to tell him.

I have been shoplifting for a long time. Not anything very expensive — just little things. I have never been caught, but I think some of the clerks suspect me by the way they look at me.

I have made up my mind to stop completely, but I am so sick with guilt feelings that I am on the verge of a nervous breakdown. If I tell my doctor, do you think he will report me to the police? I will do anything to be cured, but I wouldn't want to shame my family with any publicity. Please, please help me.

NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Tell your doctor. Your secret will be safe with him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband does business with investment firms, and he claims that in order to get preferred treatment he has to "be nice" to the girls in the office.

I realize that if a secretary or a telephone operator likes you, she will be more inclined to put you through to the boss or give you an early appointment, so a gift of perfume or some little gift at Christmastime is okay. But I think my husband is overdoing it.

He is always taking one of these girls out for dinner and dancing. He says he can put it on his expense account — it's not taking anything away from me, so I have no kick coming.

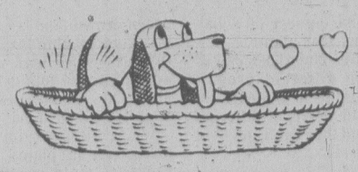
Not only that, but he refuses to tell me who the girls are or where he entertains them. In other words, it's strictly business, so it's none of my business. What do you think?

SITTING HOME

DEAR SITTING: I think your husband is using the "strictly business" excuse to justify a lot of monkey business. Furthermore, if you hold still for this, you are out of your tree.

Rx TO KEEP DOG 'FOREVER'

By DR. FRANK MILLER



DEAR DR. MILLER: Can you give us a prescription list for a long life for a dog? Roland is our first and he is so adorable we just have to keep him forever.—C.D.

DEAR C.D.: Regarding Roland's Rx for "forever," or at least as long as possible: (1) Follow your veterinarian's advice regarding nutrition, exercise and vaccination schedules. (2) Know how your dog acts and looks and feels when he is well so you will know when he may be sick. And if you suspect illness, it is better to check with the doctor too early than too late. (3) You need not only the right food and exercise but in the proper amounts so you can keep a slim, trim pet. (4) Control your dog. This means obedience training and confinement on a leash when outdoors. A domesticated dog is not "born free." It does not have the right to roam — and thus become either a nuisance or a victim or both.

(5) TLC, tender loving care. This encompasses all of the above and time willingly spent to care for all of your dog's needs, including companionship and appropriate affection.

With all of the above, there is another important point to longevity (besides luck) and that's the right puppy to begin with, one whose genetic background is not a handicap and who is, in the beginning, sound psychologically and physically. Your veterinarian is invariably an important ally not only in your pet's care through the years but in helping you determine within that first day or two if the puppy you picked is indeed a likely canine candidate for a happy, long-term future.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our Himalayan cat, Haryette, had ringworm. She was treated with a pill, an antibiotic called greasy something. About the time she was getting cleared up she had, much to our surprise, a litter of kittens, two, and both were born dead. They were very strange looking kittens. We think they had birth defects and are wondering if those pills he gave her for the ringworm could cause such a thing?—D.L.

DEAR D.L.: Yes, griseofluvin, the drug of choice for treatment of ringworm (a fungus) can indeed cause birth defects. There are a variety of therapeutic drugs or other chemical agents which may be responsible for fetal death or birth defects, in cats, as in other mammals.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If your canary has one big tail feather sticking straight off to one side, is it hopeless?—R.D.

DEAR R.D.: Your canary isn't, but the fractured feather is a lost cause. When possible, the entire fractured feather should be removed so a replacement can grow in quickly.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My pets have had a lot of breeding trouble. I've had a dog who had a caesarean, a cat who had an abortion, (it was her idea, not mine) and I had a canary die because she was egg-bound. Now I am getting into raising tropical fish and I've heard some of these get egg-bound, too. If it dangerous, how do you prevent such a thing?—V.Y.

DEAR V.T.: Egg-binding is indeed common in spoiled, soft, aquarium fish. It's also dangerous. The female may continue to produce eggs until pressure from the egg mass interferes with the function of the abdominal organs. Prevent egg-binding by keeping the fish in good condition and then permitting the right fish (those ready) to lay their eggs under proper conditions. Eggs are retained because the environment isn't right for spawning.

Some Can't Handle Milk

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I try to get as much milk as I can into my children. I have three. My 6-year-old says she gets sick whenever she drinks milk. I force it on her and sometimes she does get sick. Could all this be a game she's playing? — Mrs. T.T.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

The suggestion that this might all be a game intimates that you think your child's reaction to milk is all psychological. I constantly reiterate the fact that there is a close unity between the mind and the body. Undoubtedly, the mind can affect every body function. Yet far too often there is a temptation to tag a child's complaint as being emotional in origin. There are many known physical reasons for the inability to tolerate milk. Allergy to milk is the first thought that comes to mind. Another is the possible lack of a special enzyme necessary for the proper digestion of milk. Some people are not able to metabolize or digest lactose, or milk sugar, a substance that is found in milk. Nausea, vomiting and diarrhea are common complaints of children and adults who have this disturbance.

There now are many excellent substitutes for milk. These, with supplementary vitamins and minerals, can give your child all the nutritional requirements for health and growth that she would be getting from milk.

With the help of your doctor, you can determine if there is a physical reason for your child's resistance to milk.

I have high blood pressure and am under treatment for it. I'm 67 years old. I just found out that I need a hernia operation. Frankly, I'm scared about the combination of the two. My doctor told me I have nothing to worry about, but I would feel better if I had a second opinion from you. — Mr. G.A.

Dear Mr. A.:

The fact that your blood pressure is under control with medication suggest that a hernia operation should not loom as a threat. Many patients in your age group, with controlled hypertension, are able to withstand far more serious surgery than the repair of a hernia.

With improved pre-operative planning, with the excellent anesthesia that now is available, and with the refined techniques now being used, many of the former complications of surgery are controlled and eliminated.

In those cases where the judgment of the anesthesiologist and surgeon suggests the slightest danger about general anesthesia, the operative procedure can be performed painlessly under local anesthesia.

My "second opinion" is that you arrange to have the operation done as soon as your surgeon recommends it. To delay doing it may convert a simple operation into a complicated one.

Fertilizers: Meat Veggies, Dessert

When you buy fertilizer you receive one or more of three basic chemicals, regardless of the price paid or the brand name on the package.

These three chemicals are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, indicated by the symbols N for nitrogen, P for phosphoric acid and K for potash. They might well be referred to as the meat, vegetables and dessert of a balanced meal for plants.

The three chemicals can be mixed in different proportions and thus be a meal suitable to the needs of different plants and the requirement of different soils.

This accounts for the number of fertilizers found on the market to the bewilderment of the home gardener who in most instances is neither a plant scientist nor a chemist.

We can clear the fog a little when we understand the effect of each of these chemicals on our plants and realize that the actual amount of available food within the container is the important thing, not the brand name on the label.

Nitrogen promotes rich green-growth and is essential to a good-looking lawn, a nutritious lettuce leaf, and the appearance of foliage and its ability to synthesize elements from the air for food.

While nitrogen increases the green in plants it also promotes rapid growth which is soft, or succulent, often lacking the stiffness to stand upright and easily damaged by adverse weather conditions. It is essential to young plants but tends to prolong their juvenile state.

Phosphoric acid promotes seed production, which means good flowers on flowering plants and good seeds in our peas, beans and corn. It tends to stiffen the rapid growth made by nitrogen and turns the juvenile plant into an adult. It also produces healthy roots.

Potash is essential to all plants, a general stiffener of plant cells, balancing the effects of the other two chemicals, adding vigor, disease resistance, and promoting over-all wellbeing.

Lack of potash can result in die-back, winter-kill, and a general condition of weakness that is unable to resist attacks by various diseases. Each chemical, to do its job efficiently, depends on the assistance of the other two and the control exercised by them.

When these three chemicals are mixed we have what is called a complete and balanced fertilizer. In all mixes, trace elements needed by plants are present to some degree in the form of impurities in the chemicals which are used.

The amount of each chemical in a form available to plants must, by law, be stated on the outside of the container, and in Canada be not less than 20 per cent of the total. Therefore each 100 pounds of fertilizer must contain a minimum of 20 pounds available plant food, the other 80 pounds being not immediately available elements plus sand or diatomaceous earth which is added to make it possible for the gardener to use safe amounts without having to measure in drams as a druggist does when compounding a prescription.

The percentage of available food in a mix is shown in three figures, for example 5-10-5, indicating that the mix contains five pounds nitrogen, 10 pounds phosporic acid and five pounds potash in each 100-pound container.

To obtain five pounds of nitrogen may entail the mixing of several chemicals having a total weight of 30 to 40 pounds, one of the reasons for the difference between the weight of available food and weight of the packaged product.

The three figures on the package constitute the analysis, and we find such combinations as 4-12-4, 5-10-5, 6-8-6, 10-4-7, 10-6-4, 4-10-10, and many others, each mix prepared for certain plants, certain effects on the plants, and for various soil deficiencies.

We may also purchase these essential plant foods separately or in a combination of two, with the third one missing. Nitrogen alone is 21-0-0, ammonia-phosphate mix 16-20-0, straight potash is 0-0-45.

In these figures we have the answer to the questions most frequently asked by home gardeners, namely, what make of fertilizer do you recommend? and what fertilizer should I use in my garden?

Many manufacturers market the same formulations, so purchase any brand you prefer after comparing prices. Western producers supply the formulations needed by western soils. Eastern manufacturers put up formulations suited to soils in Eastern Canada. The location of the manufacturing plant is more important than the name of the manufacturer.

The fertilizer to use in the garden is the mix suited to produce the effects the gardener is seeking. There is no one fertilizer that will suit every kind of plant grown, nor every soil found in gardens.

For example, a green lawn needs three dressings of a complete lawn fertilizer such as 10-4-7 or 10-6-4, plus a monthly dressing of sulphate of ammonia, the acid form of nitrogen.

For vegetable greens that have substance to the leaves you need 6-8-6 or 5-10-5; for flowering plants 4-12-4, that is, high phosphoric acid; for potatoes, bulbs, root crops and onions a 4-10-10 mix.

Higher concentrations of standard balanced mixes are available such as 13-16-10 which has a balance equal to double 6-8-6, and 15-30-15 which is three times 5-10-5, and many home gardeners are having difficulties with their plants through using them without realizing their power.

These concentrated mixes were formulated for the farmer in remote areas where transportation costs were almost prohibitive. To use them safely the farmer dilutes them with sand or diatomaceous earth, both of which are readily available from nearby sources. The home gardener must do the same if the fertilizer is to be evenly distributed around plants without doing damage.

Aside from the difficulty in evenly spreading one-third of a teaspoonful over the entire root area of a plant, the cost of these high concentrations is not warranted for the small amount of fertilizer needed in a home garden.

Most local garden soils are lacking humus (manure or compost) rather than fertilizer. Add humus and the locked-up plant foods are soon released.

Whether the mix is of organic or inorganic origin, plants can only take in food as salts dissolved in water, and the salts must always be in the chemical form known as nitrates. Sulphate of ammonia is slow acting because the sulphates have to be changed to nitrates by soil organisms before the plants can use it.

The soil organisms feed on humus (compost or manure). If humus is low the soil population is minimal and most of the applied fertilizer is wasted because there are not sufficient soil organisms to convert it for plant use.

Organic fertilizer is slow acting because of the length of time needed for conversion to the required chemical. Inorganics give immediate effects but are soon carried beyond the reach of roots and need frequent replacement.

For this reason we are advised to use minimal applications which are likely to be used by plants rather than large applications most of which will be lost.

This article only touches on the fringes of the complete story. To use fertilizers wisely requires the study of library books on soil composition, soil fertility, plant growth and the way plants use plant foods.

Once the gardener has a little knowledge of these subjects and adds the required amount of humus to the soil every year, fertilizer becomes a standby to use judiciously to obtain desired results.

WORK FOR WEEK

Prick out seedlings of flowering annuals sown indoors. Do this as soon as they can be held by the tiny leaves. Don't overwater; give good light and fairly cool place away from heat source.

Plant a few potatoes for pleasure of having some freshly dug. The flavor is so much different from others. Sow a few carrots, early peas, onions.

Nip off every old flower head with the seedpod, from daffodils and all the narcissi; and from tulips as they go out of bloom. Also go over hyacinths and take off the old flower stems. This is needed to encourage the plants to utilize all soil nutrients for remaking the bulbs and the new flowers for next year. Water the bulbs if soil is porous and rain is not sufficient to reach roots.

Tourists Rise

LONDON (Reuter) — The number of tourists who visited Britain last year exceeded for the first time the number of Britons who travelled abroad.

TINY FROG JUST SINGIN' IN THE RAIN

ADELAIDE (AP) — A tiny frog that sings loudly in the rain to attract a mate has been discovered in western Australia by a joint team of zoologists from Australia and the University of Kansas.

The zoologists hope the species, known as litoria microbelos and smaller than a one-cent coin, will help shed light on the earth's past weather cycles because of its adaptation to rain forest climates.

The Villa d'Este on Lake Como in Northern Italy was built by Cardinal Tolomeo Gallio in 1568. (Fifty years after Cortez invaded Mexico.) It's now one of the world's great hotels: Large rust-colored buildings. Private grounds and gardens reach up the green mountain almost to Switzerland.

An outdoor pool floats on pontoons in the lake. Antique statues with chipped stone faces stand in the niches of the buildings. The service and food is fit for a Renaissance prince. The cost is equal to a prince's purse. The 220 rooms are always filled.

Julius Caesar was a fan of Lake Como. He sent 5,000 Romans up to colonize it — with 500 Greek slaves to do the housework.

Leonardo da Vinci, Virgil, Napoleon and John F. Kennedy came here. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote: "I ask myself, is this a dream? Will it all vanish into air?"

The blue Italian lake has a fringe of fairy tale villages. Ancient brown houses with red tile roofs lean over cobbled streets made for a mule and cart. The sun is a coin of noble gold, and there's a smell of wine and fresh-baked bread.

Plenty of inexpensive little hotels along the lake — if you're priced out of Villa d'Este you can run over there and have lunch. I saw a lot of campgrounds. Barber stripe tents on green lawns at very few dollars a day.

We drove up the lake ten miles to Guilino di Mezzegra and an old Italian woman showed us where they shot Mussolini and his girl friend. A cross in the church says: "Claretta Petacci, April 28, 1945." No monument to Mussolini — just "Duce" scrawled on a wall.

The valley of the Loire is a favorite camping place of the French and they say you can do it on less than $20 a day. I doubt this though the French are careful account keepers. Still it must be cheaper than hotels.

Now European camping (there are several thousand camp grounds) is not the pioneer thing we do. The European sets up his camping like a luxury apartment outdoors.

The campground is a level lawn. The camper cooks on a Gaz stove, whipping up fluffy omelettes with eggs and butter from local farmers. Most camps I saw in the Loire valley had swimming pools and laundries and bathrooms.

There are free camp grounds, but best ones are private. They charge a few dollars a day.

Biggest cost is camper rental — if you do it that way.

These can be rented in big cities. Weather's warm and sunny. Tent foils the occasional rain. And there's always a cozy bistro in the village.

You can rent bicycles all over Europe. They cost very little and they don't use gasoline. They are the easiest way for local transportation.

The most likely place to pick one up is right at the railroad station — there are something like 70 stations in France alone that have bicycles for rent.

Any house in resort areas of Europe and the Caribbean is a "villa." Like any resort house in French Canada is a "Chalet."

I've seen some real cracker boxes for rent under these attractive names.

Several U.S. overseas rental firms have brochures. But even so, it's a dicey proposition. Pictures don't give you the three-dimensional view that walking in and seeing if the toilet flushes does.

One "villa" I lucked into was something grand. Another — same company, same price, same area — was dismal. Often the U.S. firm is taking the listing from an overseas firm and simply tacking a fat commission on top.

If you can chance it, go to the area you want and deal with a local agent. In southern Spain, get a guarantee the roof won't leak. In the Caribbean, check for biting, flying bugs. In Mexico, see if the plumbing works.

In Mexico don't rent by mail. Go down, take a hotel for a day or two and look at the places. The advertisement "swimming pool" doesn't mean it really holds water.

All that's missing is swashbuckling knight

Conde de Gondomar: It's a pip of a parador

BAYONA, Spain — Gulls wheel against the grey sky and far out to sea a single fishing boat rocks on heavy swells.

Waves roll toward the rocky, twisting coastline of Bayona and the lone fisherman becomes lost in the growing darkness.

Black clouds gather on the horizon and soon the sky and the sea are one and the same. Total darkness is only moments away, and now in the twilight hours the village of Bayona is at peace with the world.

IT IS particularly restful at Conde de Gondomar, a magnificent Spanish parador occupying a prominent position on the peninsula of Monte Real, with steep cliffs and private grounds and striking, manicured gardens.

During the day, guests hike to beaches nearby to sunbathe and listen to the melody of the surf and to play among the tide pools.

IN ALL of Spain, few paradores compare with Conde de Gondomar. A special place, it is set along the Atlantic with the privacy of a royal estate — only a few miles from the Portuguese border and quite near the fishing village of Vigo. Honeymooners find it particularly romantic. Indeed, there is a wedding chapel where couples are united; afterward they need only stroll the few yards to the privacy of the parador.

THE 45-ACRE peninsula on which the parador rests is surrounded by castellated halls, with access to a modern yacht basin, a swimming pool and tennis courts.

One half-expects some swashbuckling knight to come ambling down a hall, or else to encounter Douglas Fairbanks leaping from a staircase to a chandelier, sword in hand, lashing out at the enemy in the remake of some half-forgotten film.

Julius Caesar fought nearby and the barbarians poured in from the north and later the Moors came ashore from Africa.

More importantly, it was from one of the battlements at Bayona that inhabitants glimpsed the first of Columbus' three caravels returning home from the New World.

Later, Sir Francis Drake was repulsed by defenders at Bayona and pirates sought refuge along a scraggy coastline.

NOW, THOUGH, only visitors invade Bayona and Parador Conde de Gondomar, whose rooms in the low season are offered at pre-inflation prices of $7.50 a day single and $10 double. In summertime, the rates are hiked to $14.85 and $18.60, tax and service included. (For an extra $11.75 they'll even provide all three meals.)

Throughout Spain, the parador (as well as the more modest albergue) remains Iberia's finest bargain with shelter provided for as little as $3.50 a night.

During the high season, one may remain up to 10 days in a parador and 48 hours at an albergue.

WHILE THE albergue often resembles a modern motel, the paradores generally occupy an old palace, a convent or monastery that has been renovated or reconstructed.

One of Spain's popular paradores, the San Francisco, adjoins the Alhambra and the gardens of the Generalife at Granada. In such a dream-like setting, reservations — for obvious reasons — are hard to come by. One must book space weeks in advance.

ANOTHER worthy of mention is Parador de Los Condes de Villalba near Lugo. With a dungeon-like dining room, great stone walls and impressive murals, it is reached by drawbridge. Again, one expects some knight to come rattling through the great doorway, sword drawn and ready to do battle.

While researching "Iberia," author James Michener was a frequent visitor to the Spanish paradores. To travel through Spain in such a manner, Michener confessed, "is to travel at its best and most reasonable."

SPAIN'S paradores are government-operated featuring first-rate plumbing, immaculate kitchens and generally cozy guest rooms such as those provided here in Bayona at Conde de Gondomar.

In all of Spain, though, no parador could possibly compare with Hostal de los Reyes Catolico, in Spain's spiritual capital of Santiago de Campostela, 60-odd miles north of Bayona.

A five-star hotel, it was built originally as a pilgrim's hospital by Ferdinand and Isabella in the 15th century. It is operated by the Entursa Hotel chain.

Uncrowded gem in corner of Japan

History abounds in Miyazaki

By PHILIP SOUSA

MIYAZAKI, Japan — Here's where your guidebook goes out the window — along with the preconceived image of Nippon as a land of cool weather and wall-to-wall people.

Most, if not all, travel books on the Orient sold in North America mention Kyushu, southernmost of this country's four major islands. And some of the publications pay lip service to Beppu, Fukuoka, Nagasaki and perhaps a couple of other worthwhile stops on the island. But none of the several guidebooks I looked up before I came here had a word to say about Miyazaki and the prefecture of which it is the political and economic centre.

YET THIS is one of the most attractive, sunny and least crowded corners of the nation.

Miyazaki is under two jet hours from Tokyo. By train it is a smooth, vista-filled day-long journey; or for a truly delightful experience, you can make it by steamer from Tokyo or Osaka in 19 or 14 hours, respectively.

MOST OF what you find in this area you won't find anywhere else in Japan.

You'll first be surprised and impressed by the tropical feeling of this region: palm trees, lush ferns and other plants and flowers.

The sky is nearly always blue and visible. Temperatures never dip below 15 C.nor rise to uncomfortable levels. The pace is slower than in Kyushu's other cities which, in turn, are less hectic than, say, Tokyo, Osaka and Kyoto.

THE CITY of Miyazaki itself is a reflection of the namesake prefecture around it — neat avenues and streets crowded only with tropical trees and flowers, mostly low-rise buildings and bright, nearly constant sunshine; with a population of about 215,000 inhabitants, a small town by Japanese standards.

You'll see tourists in and around town, but almost without exception they'll be Japanese. Foreigners haven't discovered the place.

Most Japanese come solely for a change of weather, much as Canadians head for Florida when winter grips the country.

WHETHER to escape less benign weather, play golf or take in the natural or engineered wonders, visitors here can choose from a number of hotels that span the price range. Largest and poshest is the 304-room Sun Hotel Phoenix, a sprawling seaside resort complex where, among other pursuits, you can let hot mineral spring waters soothe your body and mind, play golf to your heart's content assisted by attractive girl caddies, swim or sunbathe in privacy, and shop for lacquerware and other local handicrafts.

IN—TOWN attractions include Heiwadai Prefectural Park, with its 121-foot-high Peace Tower built on a large and old burial mound; the Haniwa Garden, also in this park thick with pines and azaleas, an outdoor display of reproductions of the haniwa objects (clay figurines) archaeologists discovered underneath, and nearby Miyazaki Shrine, an unusually Spartan but nevertheless attractive place of worship dedicated to Jimmu, the first emperor.

MOST VISITORS head south for a look at the magnificent shore, the Nichinan Coast, that runs 104 kilometres from Miyazaki to Cape of Toi.

On this stretch you'll find Kodomonokuni, Children's Land, a treat to the young of all ages that features playgrounds, rides and something you'll hardly find elsewhere in Japan — camel rides.

Also Aoshima, a tiny islet thick with tropical vegetation, a beautifully ornate shrine, as well as a unique natural feature: rocks that completely circle the island and have been eroded by the ocean in a washboardlike pattern.

FARTHER south is Cactus Garden, where more than one million cacti bloom vivid orange in the summer; Udo Shrine, located in a cave that overlooks the Pacific Ocean; Kojima Island, home of a large band of monkeys; and Cape of Toi, a sort of Japanese Land's End where wild horses and other animals roam at will in a hilly setting as unspoiled as it is beautiful.

Oahu's North Shore

Beyond Pali lies startling beauty

VISITORS who continue on instead of turning back to Waikiki find uncrowded beaches, along with great surfing and resort facilities like these along Oahu's scenic North Shore.

KAHUKA, Hawaii — Pali Lookout, the spectacular mountain pass behind Waikiki Beach, draws millions of visitors every year.

Nothing startling about that. If you've been there you know: Only 17 kilometres north-east of Hawaii's most famous strip of beach and hotels, the lookout serves as a lofty window on one of these islands' most impressive bits of scenery.

Even the usually short downpours that often hit this spot contribute to the gloriously green and wet panorama in front of you. Stick around a few minutes and, more often than not, the rain will stop, the sky will blue again, the sun will shine and there, as if seen from a cloud, practically half of the island of Oahu will unfold before your eyes.

No, it is not startling that millions every year flock to the lookout.

What is indeed surprising is that most of those who get up to Nuuanu Pali, as the cliff-hanging pass is formally known, usually make a U-turn and head right back to Waikiki.

What a pity!

Beyond Pali lies Oahu's North Shore, the island's uncrowded, mostly unspoiled and very attractive backyard.

A world of its own, at once removed from the fast pace of Honolulu and nearby Waikiki and yet close enough so that you can reach them in about an hour, the North Shore is thus a double holiday treat. This state's most alluring features—sunshine, swimming, surfing, etc.—are yours in a superb and uncrowded setting. Yet, if you want a taste of the fast-paced action on the other side of the island, all you have to do is take an hour's drive.

Among other things, the North Shore boasts the world's biggest rideable surf.

Mention Waimea, Banzai Pipeline, Sunset Beach, Kawela Bay, Kahuku Point or any other North Shore beach and the eyes of anyone who claims to be a serious surfer light up with pleasure.

Here's where you find the sport's best practitioners doing their wet thing. And here's where if you bump into anything, chances are it's one of the steady, tall waves rather than other surfers or their boards.

Ditto for everthing else you may wish to do or not do, for utter inactive relaxation is widely pursued here. And that would include diving, snorkelling, tennis, golf, hiking, swimming and bicycling.

It's double holiday treat for surfers minus crowds

You can do it all and never feel crowded in. Or you can do nothing more strenuous than lying on the sand or by a pool.

Although rural and rugged, this, the windward side of Oahu is not without its share of tourist attractions. In fact, at least three of the island's popular points of interest are located in this area: Kahuku Sugar Mill here, the Polynesian Cultural Center at Laie, and near the picturesque fishing village of Haleiwa, Waimea Falls Park.

A combination of restored sugar mill, amusement park and shopping complex, Kahuku Sugar Mill offers a fine introduction (through its worthwhile "World of Sugar" tour) to the tale of Hawaii's sugar industry.

In the process, you get a glimpse of old Hawaii since the attractions include a handsome display of artifacts, photos and other memorabilia dating back to the 1890s when the Kahuku mill was one of the biggest in the world.

Just a few kilometres down the shore on Kamehameha Highway is Laie, a Mormon bastion of geat beauty within whose borders thrives what no doubt is one of the state's most successful and rewarding visitor-oriented enterprises, the Polynesian Cultural Center. On display every day but Sunday are the arts and crafts of Samoa, Tahiti, Hawaii, Fiji, Tonga and the Maoris of New Zealand.

A nonprofit educational activity owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the PCC offers a gracious introduction to the various cultures of the South Pacific; this encounter, incidentally, becomes more meaningful when you learn that the mostly young men and women who demonstrate for you the art of Maori poi ball swinging, Tahitian hula dancing, Hawaiian basket weaving, etc., are natives of the six islands represented at the center.

Tourism at expense of the poor

By DONALD L. RHEEM

The dream of exotic travels to distant shores may become increasingly difficult to fulfill. Aside from the problems of airline strikes, hijackings, and rising costs, the tourist may be most disappointed when he finds himself unwanted in many of the world's developing countries.

Some critics maintain that tourism does a developing economy more harm than good, and Herbert Hiller, past executive director of the Caribbean Travel Association, tends to agree.

Of his own area, he comments, "mass tourism is not going to support Caribbean development. It may fill hotel rooms, but that is not the same as development. It may make the annual statistics of the Caribbean Travel Association show a percentage growth. But that is not the same as development."

The Caribbean still suffers from severe economic problems after years of active tourist industry participation. Dr. Hiller believes the problem continues because ". . . we let our tourism be shaped by decisionmakers who have the least to gain by paying attention to the Caribbean. I refer particularly to the overseas marketing authorities whose primary concern is to move masses of people."

Tourism traditionally has been a valuable source of income to developing countries, especially those which lack salable natural resources. It always has been assumed that money from tourism inproves foreign exchange and employment, and makes possible otherwise impossible overall development.

However, reports show that in most of the developing countries the tourist dollars rarely make it to the most needy segment of the population. In most cases only a small percentage of the money stays in the country at all, since most of it goes to goods and services supplied by foreign industry and foreign-owned travel operations.

In one United Nations study, the Kenya government reportedly received only four per cent of every tourist dollar, and it is doubtful that more than a fraction of that was funnelled to development projects aiding the poor.

With tourism growing at over 10 per cent a year, some critics worry about the increasing administrative burden on the developing governments. And in a recent issue of "Development Forum," a UN publication on development problems, questions are raised concerning the expenses of national airlines which seldom turn a profit, airports with anti-hijacking facilities, roads, and hotels.

The article claims that these types of "tourist" development often come at the expense of indigenous development aimed at the rural and urban poor. The piece contends that large-scale tourist development and infrastructure leaves the developing countries ever more dependent on the Western world.

World Wildlife Fund conservationist Ellis Minds, in an interview in Nairobi, expressed his concern that the Third World countries are spending vast sums of money in support of the tourist trade (brochures, entertainment of travel agents, hotels, and facilities) but seem to ignore the necessary steps to preserve those qualities of culture and natural habitat unique to each country. As a result, the tourist industry grows while the environment that the tourists are coming to see deteriorates.

This appears to be the situation in Kenya where wildlife stocks are declining at alarming rates while a four-year, $170-million tourist development program does little to aid the problem. According to Monks, "what is done for pure conservation is minimal; it is only a spin-off of the tourist development scheme."

The growing conflict between the "have" and "have-not" nations is nowhere more visible than in tourism. The differences in culture are visually inescapable when a busload of foreigners empties like a ruptured dam into a native village with cameras clicking and jewelry gleaming.

Sociologists warn of the apparent breakdown in traditional values that often results from this contrast. When I commented to a tourist official in Bali about the number of beggars, he replied that they did not exist before tourism came to his island, and that they make more in a week than a farmer can in a month.

Arpad von Lazar, professor of international development studies at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, feels that one of the greatest dangers of tourism may be in the desires it creates in the developing society for Western goods and values that cannot be provided by the developing economies typical in the Third World.

No one wants to end Third World tourism. But for the effect of hordes of visitors on foreign exchange, employment, and development to be positive, policymakers must bear in mind the country's needs, the environment, and the economy.

The benefits of tourism could be increased significantly, too, by the formation of country-by-country tourist policies that maximize the involvement of indigenous materials, labor, services and management, while minimizing cultural disruption.

Tourists are finding themselves unwanted in many of the world's developing countries

More Barren Marriages

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Doctors say it is happening in increasing numbers among the post-Second World War babies, now in their 30s and ready to have their own children.

Well-established in their careers, they decide to stop whatever birth control method they have been using and begin shopping for nursery furniture. But nothing happens.

Doctors at the American Fertility Society conference in New Orleans said 10 percent of all marriages are barren and the numbers are increasing.

They blame several factors of modern living for the increase in childless marriages of couples who now want children..

"The problem in many ways is related to our present society," said Dr. Lawrence Durbin, chairman of New York University's Urology Department. "Because of the women's movement, many women want to have a career before getting married and having children. Therefore, (because the women are older) we need men with much better semen to get them pregnant."

Chemical contamination of the envronment, increasing exposure to radiation, even increased sexual promiscuity can be linked to rising infertility rates.

Dr. Luigi Mastroianni, chairman of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School's Gynecology Department, said women once treated for venereal disease and cured may be sterile because of scar tissue in the Fallopian tubes.

Mastroianni said the same problem — blockage of the tubes — can occur spontaneously in older women, he said.

Although men can remain fertile into their 80s, Durbin said the quality of the sperm decreases with the man's age, making it more difficult for him to father a child.

The most important thing necessary for a fertile man is his ability to produce "good, healthy, well-developed sperm capable of movement," Durbin said. "As a man gets older, his sperm quality gets worse and as time progresses, the chances of a disease entity affecting his sperm increases."

Studies show infertility problems in husbands cause about 30 percent of the barren marriages, but more than half can be helped.

"In our practice, over 70 percent of the men had improvement with a 55 percent pregnancy rate," Dubin said.

Infertile men can be treated with hormones to improve sperm development and microsurgery to correct varicose veins that cause sperm blockage. Hormone treatment for egg or sperm production and microsurgery to correct blockage problems are used to correct fertility problems in both men and women.

Another factor witnessed by the physicians is an increase in patients who underwent voluntary sterilization procedures and later want to reverse this "permanent" birth control method.

Men losing custody of their children in a divorce, women wanting to have children with new husbands and couples experiencing the death of a child often seek sterilization reversals.

"The divorce rate is high and so is tubal sterilization — the most common used of contraception methods among women over 30," Mastroianni said.

"We are experiencing a vasectomy counter-revolution," Durbin said.

Both doctors said the success rate of such reversal was higher for women.

"But the success rate (for vasectomy reversal) is improving at the present," Durbin said. "Probably 85 percent will have some sperm rate and in general about a 50 percent pregnancy rate."

A major problem in reversing vasectomies is caused by some men's tendency to develop antibodies to sperm production.

Mastroianni said a significant number of requests for female sterilization reversals come from women who in the 1960s and early 1970s decided they never wanted children and underwent tubal ligation.

"They'd say, 'I know what I want and I'm over 21 and it's my body'," he said.

Not only is the infertility rate increasing, but both doctors said more are refusing to accept childlessness as an act of God and more are seeking professional help at fertility clinics.

"People are no long willing to accept being infertile," Dubin said. "They know something can be done."

The mere psychological stress of being barren can complicate a couple's infertility problems, the doctors said.

"It is an emotionally damaging condition which must be handled with delicacy and understanding, especially for the woman," Mastrtoianni said. "It is difficult for an infertile couple if the woman is okay and the man is sterile, but they can still elect artificial insemination.

"Changing attitudes aside, we are stuck with the fact that the woman has the uterus — she has to incubate the baby."

But Dubin said the inability to father a child can lead lead to sexual and psychological problems in men that compound the infertility problem.

"It is such a threat to his ego," Dubin said. "It's such a terrible psychological problem, the wife usually has a problem just getting her husband to come to the office."

He said about 5 percent of the infertile men he treats also suffer from some form of sexual dysfunction as a psychological side effect.

"But many can be helped if the doctor knows about the problem," he said.

Victim Gets $89,000

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wayne Riha, 21, of Winnipeg, has been awarded $89,000 by the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench for injuries suffered in a traffic accident in 1975.

Because of the injuries, Riha was left with permanent mental and physical damage and now is employed as a floor sweeper.

Disease Reported

Historic Sites for Sale

LONDON (UPI) — Would anyone like to buy an ancient Roman city, only partly excavated?

How about land where William the Conqueror may — or may not — have stepped ashore in 1066 to begin the Norman Conquest of Britain?

These sites are offered in two new schemes to sell tiny parcels of historic England, particularly to Americans and Australians.

In both projects buyers get formal, legal ownership of their plot of English earth, a title deed suitable for framing — and not much else. But sales started with a rush.

"We haven't really begun, but we have indeed sold a reasonable number of plots," said Hugh Becker, whose Roman city organization plans a big advertising campaign in the United States soon.

Calleva was the capital of a tribe allied to Rome, and expanded to cover 100 acres after the Romans invaded in 43 A.D. It flourished for 400 years.

Now it is an oddly-shaped farm, mostly surrounded by Roman city walls a mile-and-a-half long and up to 10 or 12 feet high. Its modern name is Silchester and it is 45 miles west of London.

Archeologists dug at it for 100 years, off and on, always re-covering the excavations so crops could be grown. These digs produced a city plan which has been called "incomparably the fullest that we have of any such local capital the length and breadth of the Roman Empire."

But Becker and a top-level board — it includes leading professors of archeology — are certain there is much more to find.

"Recent re-excavation has shown that there is still a great wealth of information and artifacts to be recovered," said Dr. Michael Fulford, who re-dug part of Calleva's forum last year.

The problem is how to finance more work. Enter a company called Calleva Atrebatum Ltd.

It has parcelled the buried city into 800 plots of about an eighth of an acre. Recently it began selling them for $1,500 each.

At least a third of the proceeds will go to a charity trust which will own excavation rights and all finds "in perpetuity." It hopes to convert a 300-year-old building inside the walls into a museum.

"This is a very unique way of raising money for an archeological project of this kind," Becker said. A "very pleased" British government is backing the scheme, he said.

A more light-hearted venture is run by John Arthurs, who owns 18 acres bordering Pevensey Bay where William of Normandy landed with his army to launch the Norman Conquest.

Some authorities think Arthurs' place was under water at the time, but he is convinced of its historic value. He has divided part of it into 4 million plots, each 16 square inches — about the size of a bathroom tile — and is selling them for $3.70 each.

"They have been selling like hotcakes," said the manager of a London airport souvenir store.

OOPS! BAND BLEW IT!

BOGOTA (Reuter) — China's soccer diplomacy in Latin America ran into a problem when a local band mistakenly played the Taiwanese national anthem before a match between a Colombian team and a visiting Chinese one. The band stopped playing half way through the rendering when the error was pointed out. Colombia recognizes Taiwan and has no diplomatic relations with Peking.

Trains Collide

TUNIS (Reuter) — A rail crash involving two passenger trains in the Runis suburbs injured 148 persons, the Tunisian news agency TAP reported. TAP said all but about 30 persons suffered only minor injuries.

Wrecks Keep Divers Busy

PROSPECT, N.S.(CP) — The diving hobby of Vern Rutland often brings him to the shoal-cluttered ocean where his underwater activity takes him along a scattered collection of silverplates and other assorted wreckage.

The wreck is all that remains today of what was once the most luxurious passenger liner afloat. On April 1, 1873, the Atlantic was snared by the Prospect reefs during a storm and 546 men, women and children were drowned.

"You wouldn't even know it's a shipwreck unless you'd passed one before," says Rutland, a Halifax resident who has rescued a number of small curios from the wreck.

The diver says the most obvious remnants are three ship's boilers, standing in a row about 19 metres below the surface, but much of the rest is buried below hard-packed silt. In 50 hours of work, Rutland and three companions managed to dig a hole two metres long, a metre wide and a metre deep.

Rutland says the remains of the liner lie off the rugged coast, a decaying mess to some eyes but an object of endless fascination to a diver.

He estimated there are enough "treasures" to entertain weekend divers for another 30 years.

The one thing he would most like to find is the ship's vault although he doubts it still lies near the wreck.

Prospect residents of the day recalled that after the ship's owners had finished their salvage work, a couple of American ships carried out operations in the area and "they took off awful fast one day," leaving local residents with the feeling that they had found the vault.

But the wreckage has yielded a number of smaller treasures.

Since they started diving last August, Rutland and two companions have recovered silver plates and spoons, some almost-intact wine bottles and a bottle with its content of English meat sauce unspoiled.

World Food Study

WINNIPEG (CP) — Greater Canadian support for self-sufficiency in food production in developing countries is urged in a report released by the North-South Institute.

The report also recommends increased Canadian food production, coupled with vigorous support for an international agreement on world grain reserves.

The 68-page study, the latest in a series on relations between developed and developing countries, is entitled World Food and the Canadian "Breadbasket."

It expreses concern that the improvement in food production and stocks in recent years will lead to complacency about world food problems.

"Dependence of many food-deficit countries on commercial food imports is projected to grow dramatically over the coming two decades," the report says.

"More alarmingly, increasing numbers of people, who lack the purchasing power even to make their needs felt in commercial markets, will join the quarter of the world's population which now remains undernourished."

The report projects that the number of undernourished people will increase to 1.6 billion by 1985 unless an additional 108 million tonnes of cereals are produced to fill this "hunger gap."

Part of the report surveys recent efforts by nations to reach an international agreement on grain reserves, efforts which began last year on the initiative of U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

Who Should Play God?

Genetic Screening: Exorcising the 'Bad Genes'

By Ted Howard
and Jeremy Rifkin
Pacific News Service
(Seventh of nine parts)

In Minneapolis, a married couple sits in the office of a genetic counsellor. They are about to be informed of the statistical chances of their next baby having a genetic deformity . . .

A doctor in Los Angeles uses a needle to slowly withdraw amniotic fluid from the womb of a three-month pregnant woman. Analyzing the chromosomes in the liquid, the doctor will be able to give his patient a good idea of the genetic quality of her unborn child . . .

A bay is born in Buffalo, N.Y. One of its first life-experiences is having a few drops of blood pricked from its foot. Doctors will use the blood to screen for the presence of a dozen genetic disorders . . .

Genetic screening — the testing of individuals for various chromosomal defects — is already an established medical practice.

Few people argue that it is immoral or unethical to spare parents the burden of giving birth to a mongoloid child, or detecting genetic defects early in a baby's life. But how far do you want to go in analyzing our genetic makeup?

According to the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, 12 million Americans carry defective genes or chromosomes. Genetic defects are present in five per cent of all live births. Eighty per cent of all babies born mentally retarded are the victims of genetic disease.

Add to the equation the fact that an estimated 2,000 human disorders are genetically determined, and that each of us, no matter how healthy, carries three to eight "bad" genes that could conceivably cause some of these disorders, and the problem begins to take on epidemic proportions.

The most widespread screening technique is postnatal screening, usually performed on babies immediately after birth. Today 90 per cent of all newborn babies are screened before they leave the hospital, most without the knowledge of their parents.

The first genetic disease for which a screening test was developed was phenylketonuria (PKU), a disorder caused by the lack of a single enzyme. Untreated, PKU leads to severe mental retardation. Forty per cent of those born with the disease have an IQ of less than 10. But by detecting PKU very early in life, doctors can prescribe a specific diet for the baby that allows it to develop into a normal child. Today, 43 states have PKU screening laws.

No one objects to such "preventative medicine." Yet what many people find troublesome in genetic screening programs is the unstated assumption that some people have "bad" genes.

What is a "bad" gene? Since all of us have an estimated three to eight defective genes, it is conceivable that a 100 per cent effective screening program would show that all of us fail the test of perfection. But not all of us do. The fate of those who are screened in current programs is to carry the burden for us all. "Like it or not," writes Barbara Culliton in Science Magazine, "there is always the problem of making people feel stigmatized by telling them there is something wrong with their genes."

The sickle-cell anemia screening program of the past decade is a good example of how "gene stigmatization" can develop.

Sickle-cell anemia, a disease that affects only black people, causes no harm in those who carry it as a recessive trait. But if passed on through dominant inheritance to a child, it proves fatal. There is no cure for those who inherit the disease; they die very young before they can transmit their disorder to the next generation.

In the 1960's, sickle-cell anemia became a political cause celebre in the U.S. By 1972, Congress had passed the Sickle-Cell Control Act providing states with money to launch screening programs.

Immediately, significant problems in the program became evident. Screening children was a way to diagnose the disease before it manifested itself, but since there is no cure for the always fatal disorder, critics questioned the value of informing a child and his parents that he would die young. As Dr. Amitai Etzioni, an opponent of the screening program protests, "you can't help a seven-year-old, and you make him fell like a freak."

The sickle-cell screening program not only fails to provide medical help to those affected by the disease, but it also has led to widespread confusion about the important difference between those who simply carry the sickle cell trait and those who carry the disease. Carriers have no health problem; victims die.

Because of the confusion about what the screening tests showed, insurance companies have charged blacks higher rates, even though they were not diseased. Some blacks reported they lost their jobs after being screened. Six airlines instituted policies refusing to hire blacks who carried the sickle-cell trait.

The one positive result of the program predicted by its proponents — dissuading people who carried the trait from marrying each other and passing it along to the next generation — never materialized. In recent years, several states have abandoned the sickle-cell program.

Many critics see in the sickle-cell example problems inherent in much of the screening process: lack of solid medical evidence, social stigma and psychological consequences.

Amniocentesis, the withdrawal of amniotic fluid from the womb of a pregnant woman, presents another, and deeper, ethical problem. Of all the genetic technologies currently being developed, this form of pre-natal screening offers the greatest benefits to the individual. Through amniocentesis, and subsequent abortion, parents can be spared the agony of giving birth to a baby afflicted with a disease like mongolism that would imprison it for life.

Dr. Cecil B. Jacobson, chief of the Reproductive Genetics Unit at George Washington University and one of the initial developers of amniocentesis, proposed broader application of the technique to prevent a wide range of abnormalities.

"I'd like to take the thing a few steps further," he says. "Would you, for instance, want to conceive a child who will die of cancer at age 40, if the tendency for the development of cancer can be shown before birth? Naturally at this point we're not able to do that. But if we could tell what fetuses are going to be affected with cancer in their 40's and 50's, I would be for aborting them now. That would eliminate some types of cancer forever."

Jacobson says he would also favor abortion "if both parents want only girls and the current pregnancy tests by amniocentesis to be a boy. I just don't recognize any absolute here."

Not all Dr. Jacobson's medical colleagues are so eager to abort unpopular fetuses. Dr. Daniel Callahan at the Hastings Institute is one who takes exception.

"Behind the human horror at genetic defectiveness," he warns, "lurks . . . an image of the perfect human being. The very language of 'defect,' 'abnormality', 'disease' and 'risk' presupposes such an image, a kind of prototype of perfection."

Bye Bye Birdie?

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — The Dutch air force is perfecting a weapon to confound its most persistent enemy — birds.

Dutch airfields already use a variety of methods to fight the menace, including recorded bird cries, flashing lights and detonations.

The new device, designed by Capt. Bob Randall of CP Air, Vancouver, scares seagulls, the defence ministry says, but crows take no notice.

Kent State Anniversary

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Kent State University classes will be cancelled May 4 in observance of the eithth anniversary of the shooting death of four students and the wounding of nine others in an anti-war demonstration. There have been renewed campus demonstrations in recent weeks, with complaints that the university administration is insensitive to efforts to resolve once and for all the facts surrounding the 1970 shootings.

Insurance Donated

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese confectioner whose wife disappeared from a train between France and Switzerland while vacationing last summer says he is donating about $181,000 from her life insurance to charity as a "token of gratitude" to foreign authorities and Japanese official for helping recover his wife's body.

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number 53 — Congratulations to Alderman Bill McElroy for his suggestion that the 20-minute question period be held before city Council meetings or public hearings commence. This will enable more Senior Citizens to participate in the question period at 7:30 p.m. Unless City Council moves quickly to improve the intersection at Bay and Government Streets, somebody is going to be killed. Your City's Watchdog was told on numerous occasions, serious accidents have occurred lately. On one occasion, a truck lost a load of steel and on another, a large piece of construction equipment fell off onto the road, because of the very rough surface so let's hope the Public Works Department will correct his potential hazard immediately. Why is it that just before or during the tourist season, the city is digging up our streets, creating traffic problems, for example, on Superior Street between Government and Menz

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Japanese Expeditions Nearing North Pole

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Japanese expeditions to the North Pole are travelling in continual daylight and improving ice conditions and are within 200 nautical miles of the pole, says a spokesman for NASA, whose satellite is tracking one of the journeys.

Don Witten said in a telephone interview from the Goddard Space Flight Centre in Maryland Friday that adventurer Naomi Uemura, 37, is travelling up to 30 nautical miles a day on his solo trip to the pole.

Uemurea is carrying an 11-pound transmitter to broadcast his location to a NASA satellite.

He reported that his main concern was a case of sunburn, while the only other serious incident on the trip was an encounter with a polar bear.

The other group is from Tokyo's Nihon University, which has left behind an RCMP investigation into treatment of dogs brought in to pull its three sleds. It also is using a transmitter.

Uemura left Ellesmere Island in the Northwest Territories March 6, with a team of 17 sled dogs for the 425-nautical-mile trip to the pole.

After reaching his goal, he plans to turn south down the length of the Greenland icecap, a 5,900-mile round trip.

The other expedition, led by Tadashi Tawada, left Ellesmere Island March 3 and now is southeast of Uemura and one to two days sledding away.

Tawada, 33, is a Navy captain and teaches diving. With him are television cameraman Susumu Nakamura, Japanese expatriate Ikuo Oshima and two Greenland Eskimos. Oshima lives in Greenland and is married to an Eskimo woman.

They have three 15-dog teams and an expedition spokesman said they have not decided whether they will return by sled to Ellesmere or have an aircraft pick them up at the pole.

Meanwhile, RCMP are investigating the deaths of 105 sled dogs brought in for the Tawada expedition. The dogs were among 180 flown to Resolute Bay, the major supply centre in the Arctic Island, on a 1½-hour flight from Thule, Greenland.

The use of transmitters is part of a broader NASA program to test its satellites.

Among transmitters distributed around the North is a miniature model on a collar strapped around a polar bear's neck. The bear was caught about eight months ago and now is roaming the Arctic icepack close to the Russian coast.

The polar bear that Uemura encountered ripped open a tent and ate a considerable portion of his supply of dogfood. Uemura managed to chase him off after the first encounter and shot the bear when it returned the next night.

Uemura's last contact with people was on March 21 when a game warden flew in to take a statement — polar bears are on the endangered species list. Regulations required him to pick up the skull and skin but Uemura had to jettison the skin because of its weight.

Both expeditions were slowed considerably by rugged conditions at the start, said Witten.

"He had to traverse monster ice pressure ridges, some of them three storeys or more high," he said. "It was more like mountain climbing than sledding."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 24-year-old inmate of Jordan River camp who escaped to spend an evening with his girlfriend last month was given an extra 30 days in jail by Judge Blake Allan in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Terry Reichenbach of Shawnigan Lake pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large March 13 while serving a term for theft and breaking and entering.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Reichenbach was noticed missing at about 3 p.m. that day. Laughton said Reichenbach was convicted Jan. 26 in Duncan of theft under $200 and six counts of breaking and entering. He was given six-month concurrent sentences on all counts and placed on 18 months probation.

Defence lawyer Peter Freeman explained that his client walked out for no reason and hitchhiked to Victoria to spend the night with his girlfriend. Freeman said Reichenbach turned himself in by phoning police to pick him up.

Allan, in rejecting Freeman's suggestion for a concurrent sentence, said that such a term would not be a deterrence to other prisoners.

A 22-year-old who pleaded guilty to having LSD when police checked a vehicle in which he was a passenger March 25 was fined $400.

Gregory Allan Shea, 572 Baker, pleaded guilty to possession of the drug and Crown counsel Chris Considine informed the court Shea was arrested by Saanich police at about 3.40 a.m. after he tried to throw the LSD, valued at between $50 and $80, away at the back of the auto. Considine said Shea was fined $75 on Nov. 11, 1973, for possession of a narcotic.

Alan Gregory Howard, 3290 Belleville, and Andrew Duncan Jarvis, 2698 Deville, both 22, elected trial by judge and jury on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

The charges are in connection with meat, cheese, cigarettes and money taken in a Feb. 17 break-in at the Capital Market, 50 West Burnside.

Alan Robert Lyness, 23, formerly of 724 Belton, was fined a total of $200 and ordered to perform 80 hours of community service work after pleading guilty to assault by trespassing and resisting a peace officer.

Laughton said Lyness and a companion were in Scott's Restaurant, 650 Yates, at about 1.50 a.m. Jan. 14 and refused to leave when requested. Laughton said Lyness' companion eventually left but Victoria city police had to be called to remove Lyness, who resisted the attempts to evict him.

Russell Crum, University of Victoria law student represent Lyness, said the pair were annoyed by slow service.

Allan levied fines of $100 on each of the two counts and also placed Lyness on six months probation.

Allan sentenced a 22-year-old to 14 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to his second drinking-driving offence in less than a year.

David Robert William Morgan, 451 Davida, entered the guilty plea on a charge of impaired driving. Laughton said Morgan was stopped on Gorge Road near Wascana at about 9.35 p.m. March 23 because his headlights weren't on.

Morgan was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 June 30, 1977, and was fined $350 at that time.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Alan Alexander MacEachern, 24, of 500 Rithet, $450; Roderick Owen-Flood, 19, of 6099 Ardmore, $450; and Cameron Harold Ritchie, 18, of 911 Darwn, $350.

Police Probe Sudden Death

CAMPBELL RIVER — RCMP are investigating the sudden death of a 63-year-old man whose body was found on the beach at Waiatt Bay on Quadra Island Friday.

A police spokesman said today Stanley Lloyd Bassett left his home on the island early Wednesday night and never returned.

A ground search was organized the next day without result.

On Friday two helicopters, a police dog and police boat joined searchers and Bassett's body was found about noon.

The cause of death has not been determined.

Bassett, a logger, was a long-time resident of the island.

Ferry Pickets Face Injunction

The president of Dolphin Piledriving said Friday he will seek an injunction if construction workers return to picket the Brentwood Bay ferry terminal where his non-union firm is doing repair work.

Ron Tidman was commenting in an interview on an information picket line which the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council set up Friday to protest work being done by the firm.

The picket line prevented the ferry sailing at 7.30 a.m. to Mill Bay but was removed about 10.30 a.m. allowing the vessel to complete a run.

The picket line was removed after the Dolphin employees left the site briefly. They returned later and continued working for the remainder of the day.

Al McMurray, organizer for the building trades council, said Friday the company was told union employees are not going to sit idly by and see their jurisdiction eroded.

McMurray, who has been spearheading a concerted attack on non-union contractors, said about 99 per cent of the piledriving work in the province is done by union firms.

The fact that Dolphin was able to get the contract from the department of highways is a serious threat to the livelihood of the organized workers, he added.

The work on the Brentwood terminal is scheduled to continue until April 28. Repairs will also be made to the Mill Bay terminal May 1-5.

Titanic Sank 66 Years Ago

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (UPI) — A U.S. Coast Guard C-130 transport dropped a wreath into the sea near an iceberg on the Grand Banks Friday to mark the 66th anniversary of the sinking of the British liner Titanic.

The four-engined Hercules aircraft, assigned to the International Ice Patrol, flew out of St. John's, Newfoundland, on a daily survey of the North Atlantic area where icebergs pose a problem. The patrol is currently keeping track of 31 icebergs and 29 smaller "growlers."

The Titanic, "unsinkable" pride of Britain's White Star Line, was about 95 miles south of the Grand Banks on its maiden voyage to New York when it struck an iceberg shortly before midnight on April 14, 1912.

A 300-foot gash was torn in the Titanic's hull and the ship sank at 2:20 a.m. April 15, taking 1,513 people down with it.

The ice patrol was created in 1913 by the International Convention on the Safety of Life at Sea held in London as a consequence of the loss of the Titanic. It is financed by contributions from 20 maritime nations whose ships ply the north Atlantic and operated by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Schools Promise Hollow?

OTTAWA (CP) — A promise by provincial premiers to provide schools for minority language groups has a hollow ring to it, Max Yalden, official languages commissioner, said Friday.

"Fine words without concrete policies leave behind a dangerous residue of bitterness and frustration that Canada cannot afford at this moment in history," Yalden said in a speech to be delivered to teachers in Toronto.

Yalden was commenting on a statement issued by the 10 premiers in Montreal earlier this year promising to provide mother-tongue education to official language minorities whenever numbers warrant.

The premiers qualified their commitment by saying each province would determine how to apply that principle.

"In other words, everything could remain as it was, or changes could be introduced if a province deemed tham to be desirable," Yalden said.

INSTRUCTIVE ERRORS

"We have lost a battle, but now we have time to adiust and win the next one", said General Desaix to Napoleon on the Plains of Alexandria just before the great victory of Marengo.

In the following game, we see how inexperienced players ignore mistakes and thus are doomed to even greater catastrophes. The studious player searches out in critical positions the best moves possible and avoids the mistakes he has made before.

India Returns Civil Liberty

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy on Thursday signed into law a bill restoring certain civil liberties which were removed from the Indian constitution during the emergency rule of former prime minister Indira Gandhi. Poster Boy Suicides

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. — Karl Huszar played Little League baseball and was active in the Boy Scouts, despite birth defects that left him with a bent-over gait. Karl, a former March of Dimes poster child, seemed a normal, happy child.

"He was a remarkable little boy," said William Manikas, principal of the Mohonasen Middle School where Karl was in Grade 6.

"If you looked at him, you'd know he had a deformity, but he'd take on anything just like any of the other kids," Manikas said.

Nobel Winners Quit Ulster Peace Group

BELFAST — Peace activists Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan, who won the 1976 Nobel Peace Prize for their fight against violence in Northern Ireland, have decided to quit the leadership of the pacifist organization they founded two years ago. Kiernon McKeown, who forms the third member of the Peace People executive triumverate along with Mrs. Williams and Miss Corrigan, told the Press Association of the decision today. McKeown said he would also quit the leadership with the two Nobel prize winners in six months. "We think this decision will help make the peace movement totally democratic," McKeown told the Press Association. "I don't think there will be any less work for us to do. It's just that there will be different people in the driving seats."

VANCOUVER — Mayor Tom Constable of Burnaby, who suffered a heart attack Thursday evening, won't be out of danger for a few days, his wife Margot said Friday. Constable, 53, collapsed at dinner. "We're lucky he's here," she said. "Last night I thought he was dead. I was giving him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until help arrived."

LOS ANGELES — The husband of a woman who was linked romantically with former U.S. president Richard Nixon in a National Enquirer article has appealed the dismissal of his suit against the weekly newspaper. Kwot Kit Faan asked the California Supreme Court on Thursday to hear his argument that his domestic life was damaged by articles linking his wife, Marianna Liu, with Nixon.

ROME — Actress Sophia Loren, already named as an accomplice in her husband's currency-transfer case, was charged Friday with illegally exporting art objects worth more than $3 million. Rome prosecutor Paolo Dell'Anno, investigating the financial status of Miss Loren and her husband, film producer Carlo Ponti, also accused the 43-year-old actress with establishing unspecified funds abroad without informing Italian officials.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — A woman who claimed an alternate personality was responsible for passing several forged cheques has been acquitted by a Superior Court jury. Ester Minor, who had been charged with two counts of forgery and one count of passing cheques with insufficient funds, said after the verdict Friday that her alternate personality no longer existed and she would not commit the crimes again.

Security Guard, $1.78M Disappear

LONDON — Police have alerted authorities at airports and and seaports to watch for a 50-year-old security guard who disappeared at the same time as $1.78 million in cash from the safes he was guarding.

Police at Banbury, Oxfordshire, identified him as Hugh Archibald Campbell, who started work six months ago as night duty controller at the safety deposit of Securicor, Britain's biggest private security organization.
